Sheriff: Victims beaten, not shot

By DEANNE JOHNSON
Staff Writer

LISBON — A week after her death, authorities released new information into what caused the death of Melinda Todd, 43, in her Salem Township home on state Route 45.

Columbiana County Sheriff Ray Stone said Monday investigators learned last week the woman did not die of gunshot wounds as was previously believed. Instead, the fatal injuries to Todd and head injuries to her grandson, Cole Reed, were both caused by blunt force trauma or beating.

Reed survived his injuries after he underwent surgery at Akron Children's Hospital last Monday. After the 5-year-old regained consciousness, investigators were trying to gain information from the boy late last week. He reportedly was able to provide "thumbs up and thumbs down" re-

While the evidence at the scene last Monday night and even an initial doctor's report suggested a firearm had been used in the crime, Stone said it was later learned that it was not the case. Todd's body was sent to the Summit County Coroner's Office, where the next day a pathologist made the determination of blunt force trauma.

Stone said he has received the verbal confirmation about the cause of death, but had not yet received a copy of the coroner's preliminary report. The information was withheld to the public last week due to the pending investigation by the sheriff's office, he said.

Stone declined to give any details about what type of item was used as a weapon to beat Todd to death, which according to a press release is being investigated as a homicide.

The cause of death would explain why neighbors in the area told deputies after the crime they did not hear any gunshots fired, despite the closeness of neighboring homes. Additionally, investigators were unable to recover any shell casings at the home.

On Friday, members of the Homicide Task Force checked the sides of the roadway along state Route 45 south of Todd's home at the corner of Salmar Drive toward the area of the road known as ski slope hill. It is unknown if the weapon or any evidence was discovered during that time.

At least three search warrants were requested in Columbiana County Common Pleas Court early last week. It is not known if any or all of them are involved in this case.

Detectives with the sheriff's department continued with interviews on Monday and are looking at a person of interest, but no arrest reportedly has been made.

Slain TSA agent former Salem resident

From staff, wire reports
CLEVELAND — The woman killed by her estranged husband Sunday in an employee parking lot at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport has been identified as a former Salem resident.

Kimberly Alkahder (AL'-keh-dehr) of Strongsville was shot and killed at around 11:30 a.m. The 20-year-old, whose maiden name was Court, attended high school in both Salem and Alliance, according to her Facebook page.

Police say 28-year-old Ahmad Alkahder fatally shot his estranged wife — a Transportation Security Administration officer — before killing himself.

The wife and a second TSA employee were commuting to work. Police say Ahmad Alkahder apparently followed her to the off-site lot, blocked her in her car with his vehicle and began firing.

Police say he fired at the other TSA agent but missed. The shooting occurred at a lot north of the airport.

Board wants buffer zone for development

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

SALEM — The city Planning Commission approved recommending a zone change Monday to help create a zoning buffer for residents east of Southeast Boulevard on Oak Street, Tanglewood, Kennedy and Edgewood drives concerned about a proposed apartment development.

"This buffer zone was put in as a protection," Commission Chairman John Panezott said.

The commission had originally discussed the idea of rezoning about 14.3 acres of land currently zoned RA multiple family to RS-2 single family two weeks ago after agreeing to forward another rezoning issue to city council related to the apartment development.

The NRP Group of Cleveland announced plans for a three-phase housing development of apartments and single-family dwellings on vacant land bordering East Pershing Street, Butcher Road and Cunningham Road. The company has a purchase option on the 67.7-acre parcel owned by Gene Zilavy. NRP Group Developer Mary Hada requested the rezoning of 6.9-plus acres along Pershing Street from C-2 commercial to RA multiple family for Phase I of the project.

Plans call for an $18 million investment in the First Phase consisting of a 120-unit walk-up apartment complex located just south of East Pershing Street where it connects to Butcher Road. A Second Phase would consist of 176 walk-up apartments located at the corner of Butcher Road and Cunningham Road. The Third Phase was described as 50 single family lots, west of Cunningham Road and southwest of

Perry trustees to review fire safety inspection proposal

By MARY ANN GREIER
Staff Writer

PERRY TWP. — Trustees said they want to check the legalities before giving township firefighters the go-ahead to start doing fire safety inspections on businesses in their jurisdiction.

"I think before we do anything, this should go to our legal counsel," Trustee Chairman Cliff Mix said. "I don't think we can jump into that."

Perry Township Firefighter Tony Constantino approached trustees with the idea, explaining the department has three firefighters certified as inspectors, but there's nothing formally set up for them to actually do inspections at commercial establishments.

He said the township would need a resolution in place so the department could do fire inspections and code enforcement.

Mix asked what the cost would be and Constantino said it would cost nothing to set up, but when a new fire code or building code comes out every five to seven years, the township would need to purchase a copy. There would also be miscellaneous training costs for the inspectors.

"What kind of liability is this going to put on the township?" Mix asked.

Constantino said there would be less liability than if they didn't do inspections on businesses and there was a fire. He said they would inspect places like the Salem Golf Club or Circle K South and other businesses.

When asked by Trustee Don Rudibaugh who does the inspections now, he said no one except in the case of nursing home facilities, which have to be inspected once a year by the State Fire Marshal's Office.

In another fire department matter, Assistant Chief Phil Panezott asked Rudibaugh if he received a request for new pagers for the fire department, saying the old pagers won't work with the new bandwidth, which is narrower. He said they're still toned out by the Columbiana County Sheriff's Office, which handles dispatching for the township, but then they have to go by their radios because the pagers aren't compatible.

At least three department pagers are compatible, but they would need 21 new pagers. Mix questioned the need since the current system of using the radios after getting toned out seems to be working. Panezott was representing Chief Bruce Whitcher who could not attend the meeting. He didn't have a cost estimate, so Rudibaugh asked to have the chief contact him with the cost.

ALMANAC

Today is Tuesday, Dec. 11, the 346th day of 2012. Ten years ago: The United States let an intercepted shipment of North Korean missiles proceed to the Persian Gulf country of Yemen a day after the vessel was detained. Five years ago: Two car bombs in Algeria, including one targeting the U.N. refugee agency's offices, killed 37 people, 17 of them U.N. employees; Al-Qaida's self-styled North African branch claimed responsibility. One year ago: Former military strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega was flown from France to Panama to face additional punishment in his home country after spending more than 20 years in U.S. and French prisons for drug trafficking and money laundering.

No one retreating; cliff talks seem at standstill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year-end deadline approaching, quiet negotiations to avoid an economy-rattling “fiscal cliff” yielded no tangible signs of progress on Monday as Republicans pressed President Barack Obama to volunteer spending cuts he will support while the White House insisted the GOP endorse higher tax rates on upper incomes.

At a campaign-style event in Michigan, Obama warned his listeners their taxes will rise on Jan. 1 without action by the Congress. “That’s a hit you can’t afford to take,” he declared.

He spoke one day after meeting privately at the White House with House Speaker John Boehner, whose office expressed frustration with the talks to date. “We continue to wait for the president to identify the spending cuts he’s willing to make as part of the ‘balanced’ approach he promised the American people,” said a written statement from the Ohio Republican’s office.

The negotiations are designed to prevent across-the-board tax increases and spending cuts scheduled to begin at the turn of the year, a combination that economists say poses the threat of a new recession.

While leaders in both parties say they are eager to avoid that “cliff,” efforts to agree on a plan to cut deficits by other measures have turned into a major postelection showdown between opposing sides in a divided government.

After meeting with Boehner on Sunday, Obama dispatched a top aide to the Capitol to continue talks with the speaker’s staff, but officials in both parties said they knew of no progress as a result. Obama spoke with Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., by phone on Monday, as he has consulted with House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi of California in recent days. The White House did not dispute that the president was prepared to modestly scale back his initial demand for $1.6 trillion in new tax revenue over a decade, twice as much as Boehner has offered.

Many Republicans agree that Obama and the Democrats hold most of the political leverage.

‘Honky-Tonk Angels’ warm, funny

By CHARLES CALABRESE

SALEM — The Salem Community Theatre’s production of Ted Swindley’s “The Honky-Tonk Angels Holiday Spectacular” is just as warm and funny as the original “Honky Tonk Angels,” whether you love country music, or you’re like me and you hate it with a passion, you will love this show.

The song parodies and one-liners exchanged by the title characters are fall-out-of-your-seat funny but still family-friendly. The sly wit of co-directors Cheryl and Gary Kekel is evident in every comic bit.

Gary Kekel’s musical versatility serves him well as musical director in this amalgam of country, soul, rockabilly and novelty songs. Choreographer Carrie Mazzucco utilizes every available inch of the crowded roadhouse set to get the most out of every production number.

The premise of the show is that the Angels are having a Christmas reunion concert with substitute angel Charilee while original angel Angela is back home in Texas, about to have twins with her beloved husband, Bubba.

In the middle of a production number, Angela makes a spectacular entrance, still very pregnant, and the show goes on, as the time for the twins’ birth gets ever closer, and the physical comedy ascends to “I Love Lucy” levels.

Julie Benner is back as Angela from SCT’s original “Honky Tonk Angels” production, stealing every scene she’s in, whether her character is singing and dancing in an advanced state of pregnancy or telling stories about life with Bubba. Benner is a force of nature and it’s only natural for the audience to delight in everything she does, especially Angela’s hilarious fantasy about three morbidly obese Elvises.

Amanda Frost also is back as twice-divorced singer-nail artist (“The Texas Chain Saw Manicurist”) Sue Ellen, singing and moving with sultry yet subtle sexiness and tossing out one-liners with casual assurance. Frost combines outer toughness with inner vulnerability to make a potentially stereotypical character into a three-dimensional human being.

Nicole Slaven joins the cast as original angel Darlene, a young woman attempting to escape her poverty-stricken home life with dreams of becoming a country star. Slaven exudes charisma as the innocent country girl with innate star quality. In addition to flawless singing and comic timing, Slaven will touch your heart with a poignant rendition of Dolly Parton’s classic “Coat of Many Colors.”

Brandy Johannntges also is new to the cast as Charilee, widow of a Mo-town semi-legend, with one foot in country and the other in rhythm and blues. It is her character who inspires a hilarious ‘60’s girl-group parody, with Johannntges in a skyscraper-high beehive and Frost and Slaven in blonde afros.

Hannah Thomas makes a brief but credible appearance as a hospital attendant.

The onstage band, the Bodacious Bobcats, aids and abets the action with lively accompaniment and strong instrumentals, with Gary Kekel on piano and acoustic guitar, Stephen Ley on drums, Dan Kalosky on bass, D. J. Depanicis on guitar and Ed Koran on pedal steel, fiddle, banjo and mandolin.

My only complaint about the production is that the program fails to list the musical numbers and writing credits for each. In a show like this, a lot of creative minds from many musical genres contributed to its success, and they deserve their share of the credit.

If you’re looking for a total entertainment package to kick off your holiday celebration, “The Honky Tonk Angels Christmas Spectacular” is just what you need. The show will be presented again at 8 p.m. this Friday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday. Call the Salem Community Theatre for reservations at 330-332-9688. This show gets my highest recommendation for all but the youngest family members.

Budget cuts could close as many as 4 Ohio prisons

COLUMBUS (AP) — Up to four state prisons and a prison camp could be closed if cuts in the upcoming state budget hit 10 percent, Ohio’s prison director has told the governor.

In an Oct. 1 budget assessment sent to Republican Gov. John Kasich’s budget director, Ohio Department of Rehabilitation and Correction Director Gary Mohr said the number of facilities — including three large facilities and one housing a special population — to be closed will depend on how deep the budget cuts turn out to be.

Mohr’s request, first reported by Gongwer News Service, was among agency budget outlines delivered to the administration ahead of the two-year operating budget due out early next year.

Mohr said at least one prison — Hocking Correctional Facility — would have to be closed in the coming biennium because of Ohio’s shrinking prison population. A prisons department spokeswoman, however, said Monday that Hocking — a small, stand-alone facility that houses older inmates — will remain open.

Mohr sent a letter to staff clarifying the new situation.

“In the three months since DRC’s initial budget scenarios were developed, an analysis of population projections demonstrates that intake will be higher than originally anticipated,” he wrote. “Prison intake, originally expected to decline by 10 percent, is now expected to decline by only 4 percent, resulting in a significant difference in our daily population.”

Kasich asked each agency to submit a budget request reflecting 100 percent and 90 percent funding — though it is unclear if budget cuts would be so severe.

Ohio’s unemployment rate inched downward again in October, to a seasonally adjusted joblessness rate of 6.9 percent that was the lowest since August 2008. Revenue has been ahead of projections.

In his letter, Mohr said that while the agency’s budget allotment isn’t yet known, “we do know that even at 100 percent funding the Agency would face an approximately $45 million reduction just due to inflation.”

SHERIFF

— A Bayard Road, Minerva, woman reported at 10:48 p.m. Saturday while she was letting her dog out her neighbor's pitbull-type dog came running into her door. The neighbor then reportedly told her she needs to learn to keep her door closed. She told the neighbor he needed to keep the dog on a leash. No one answered the door at the neighbor's apartment when deputies went there.

— Shane Gillespie, Pritchard Avenue, Lisbon, reported at 6:22 p.m. Sunday his former roommate gave him problems and so Gillespie had him move out of the apartment. Now the former roommate reportedly has been calling and texting him, sometimes using his daughter's phone. Deputies spoke to the former roommate, Joe Ertz, who said he only texted the daughter's phone because Gillespie had called him from the number before and claimed Gillespie was harassing him.

— Joe Ertz, Jefferson Street, Lisbon, reported at 7:58 p.m. Sunday when his former roommate, Shane Gillespie, had him move out he had a friend come over with a firearm on his hip to intimidate him. He further claimed Gillespie threatened to fight him several times while he was trying to move out.

— A Bayard Road, Minerva, woman reported at 6:48 p.m. Sunday sometime overnight someone fired three paintballs on her front door.

— A state Route 45, Lisbon, man reported at 8:46 p.m. Sunday he was awakened by someone pounding on his door. A neighbor saw someone go behind the complex. Deputies checked the area, but found no one.

— Several members of the Duncan family, Haiti Road, Salineville, reported at 7:37 p.m. Saturday one member of the family had attacked them. First a brother, Dana Duncan, reported his brother attacked him, then their father, Donald Duncan, who tried to stop him. Additionally, Janice Duncan said her son pushed her on her arm where she recently had surgery to get her out of the way so she could go after his brother. Finally, Aaron Duncan, claimed his brother punched his flat screen TV and destroyed his PS3 gaming system. Deputies also found a marijuana pipe in the room of the brother, who had left with his girlfriend before they arrived. A deputy attempted to speak with the accused brother on Sunday, but he told them he is working out of town and would not be returning until Wednesday.

— Darrin Wine, the manager at Italo's, state Route 45, Lisbon, reported at 12:35 p.m. Monday a bank deposit was taken from the business.

POLICE REPORTS

SALEM

— Police responded to a domestic dispute at a South Lundy Avenue home at 4:24 p.m. Sunday between a woman and her juvenile daughter and found it to be a verbal argument about personal matters. The daughter agreed to go to her father's for the evening.

— A South Lincoln Avenue resident reported at 5:59 p.m. Sunday that $212 had been charged to a debit card she lost last week.

— An East Third Street resident reported at 6:19 p.m. Sunday that a group of people had thrown an unknown object at him, which shattered nearby, while he was walking in the 100 block of North Ellsworth Avenue.

— Travis T. Sadler, 37, 340 Ohio Ave., Salem, was arrested at 6:27 p.m. Sunday for disorderly conduct after allegedly not remaining calm during an investigation that he had allegedly assaulted his wife that day.

— James R. Ray, 32, 571 N. Lincoln Ave., Salem, was arrested for domestic violence after police responded to his home at 11:41 p.m. Sunday where his fiancée alleged he assaulted her while she attempted to leave, causing visible injury to her neck and face.

— A West Fifth Street resident reported on station at 9:02 a.m. Monday that someone had made an unauthorized internet purchase through his bank account last week.

— A Lexington Avenue resident reported at 10:07 a.m. Monday that a fraudulent, apparently international charge had been made on her checking account.

PERRY TWP.

— Police responded to a report at 8:36 p.m. Sunday of an assault in progress in the parking lot at the intersection of state Route 45 and Depot Road. Upon arrival, people there said no assault occurred, but their vehicle had become disabled and one man was frustrated and was pounding on the roof of the car with his hands. All of them were identified and checked for warrants and help arrived with fuel. They were still trying to get the vehicle running when the officer who responded left.

— Thomas G. Rhodes, 50, of North Street, Salineville, was cited for failure to yield after his southbound vehicle on Cunningham Road stopped at the stop sign and then attempted to turn east onto state Route 344, colliding with a northbound vehicle driven by Marisa Fife, 46, of Youngstown, who had stopped at the stop sign and continued north on Cunningham Road into the intersection. The accident occurred at 5:52 p.m. Sunday.

— Police were called at 2:48 p.m. Sunday to Salem Acres apartments, Prospect Street, for an unruly juvenile. An officer spoke to both the juvenile and the parent, telling the parent options and telling the juvenile possible consequences of continued actions.

— Robert Michael Rice, of Salem, was cited for driving under suspension after a traffic stop at 12:07 a.m. Sunday on Georgetown Road at West Perry Street. Rice possessed an Alabama driver's license that was suspended. Two female juveniles who were passengers in the vehicle were found to have given their parents false information about their whereabouts and were taken to the police station and turned over to their parents.

— Police were called to a Benton Road residence in the 900 block at 4:11 p.m. Saturday for a sick or injured raccoon in a back yard. The animal was dispatched and the carcass disposed of by the homeowner.

— On Saturday afternoon, an officer took a report for a deer/car accident which occurred about 7:15 a.m. Friday in the 1900 block of East 11th Street when Norma Exline, 65, of Ohio Avenue, Salem, struck one of three deer attempting to cross the street, causing moderate damage to the vehicle. The accident was reported when the officer found Exline's license plate leaning against a mailbox post and made contact with the owner to retrieve the plate.

COLUMBIANA

— Charges were filed over the weekend against the following for failure to pay city income taxes: Raymond Wuckovich, Columbiana, Shane McDevitt, Leetonia, Nathan Nesselrore, Columbiana, Katie Oliver, Columbiana, Jennifer Smotrilla, Salem, Darla Cross, Columbiana, Jessica Bowman, Boardman, Brittany Neville, Boardman, Jason and Rebecca Culbertson, Columbiana, Robert and Jill Lutman, Lisbon, William Scotte Elliott, Columbiana.

— Van A. Mills, 82, Columbiana, was pulling west onto state Route 14 from the stop sign on Springfield Road at 7 p.m. Sunday and hit a vehicle that was westbound on state Route 14 and driven by Daryl Kirtley, Canfield. Mills was cited for failure to yield from a stop sign.

— The Beaver Township Police Department requested police check on a North Cross street home at 9:31 p.m. Sunday for a reported domestic. Police found it was a verbal dispute only.

— The Heartland Christian School athletic director reported at 12:48 p.m. Saturday one of the basketball coaches was ejected from a game and requested police stand by until the game ended.

— The Beaver Township Police Department reported at 10:31 p.m. Saturday a green Grand Prix with a black fender and black hood had a loud exhaust and may be in the Duquesne Street area. Police checked the area but did not see the vehicle.

— A woman reported at 10:58 p.m. Saturday a man dressed in all black was walking in the area of Duquesne Street. Police checked the area but did not see the man.

— Police went to a West Salem Street home after someone reported at midnight his ex-wife called to state that she just wanted to say good-bye. Police found the woman at a local bar and she was fine.

— A woman reported at 6:39 p.m. Friday a man was being verbally abusive to her daughter and striking a vehicle parked at the North West Street home. Police went to the home and found there was no problem.

— Police issued a trespassing warning to two kids on railroad property at 3:54 p.m. Friday.

— Police responded to a verbal dispute at a Brenda Lane home at 5:27 p.m. Friday. Monica Macklin said Adam and Breanna Little were ready to leave and there should be no further problems.

— Police arrested Michael Esenwein, Columbiana, on a city warrant for criminal damaging at 6:30 p.m. Friday.

— John Davis, Columbiana, was stopped in traffic facing northbound on North Main Street at 6:39 p.m. Friday and David Barbee, Columbiana, was northbound on North Main Street and struck Davis' vehicle in the rear. Barbee was cited for assured clear distance ahead.

— The owner of Arsuffi laundromat reported at 9:48 p.m. Friday four people were inside the business pushing and riding laundry carts around. Police told the people to move on.

OUR SIDE

Puppy or kitty under tree not wisest course

It's been said that good things come to those with patience, and we urge potential pet owners to follow that verbiage this holiday season.

This time of the year cute and cuddly creatures are a common sight at area shopping malls and pet supply stores. The canines and felines making appearances at the shopping centers are in need of good homes, and local humane societies and animal shelters are hoping the mere sight of a cute puppy or cuddly kittens will win over many hearts just in time for the holidays.

But despite the pleas, and maybe even temper tantrums, of children, we ask parents to refrain from purchasing pets as gifts this time of year, or any time for that matter, before carefully considering all options.

There are many responsibilities associated with animal adoption, and potential pet owners should have all the facts before bringing a new pet home.

Potential pet adopters should brush up on the various types of dogs and cats available in order to find the best breed for them. For example, find out which animals require special exercise needs, are prone to certain ailments and may not be good with children.

Make no mistake, choosing a family pet means a lot of time, commitment and money.

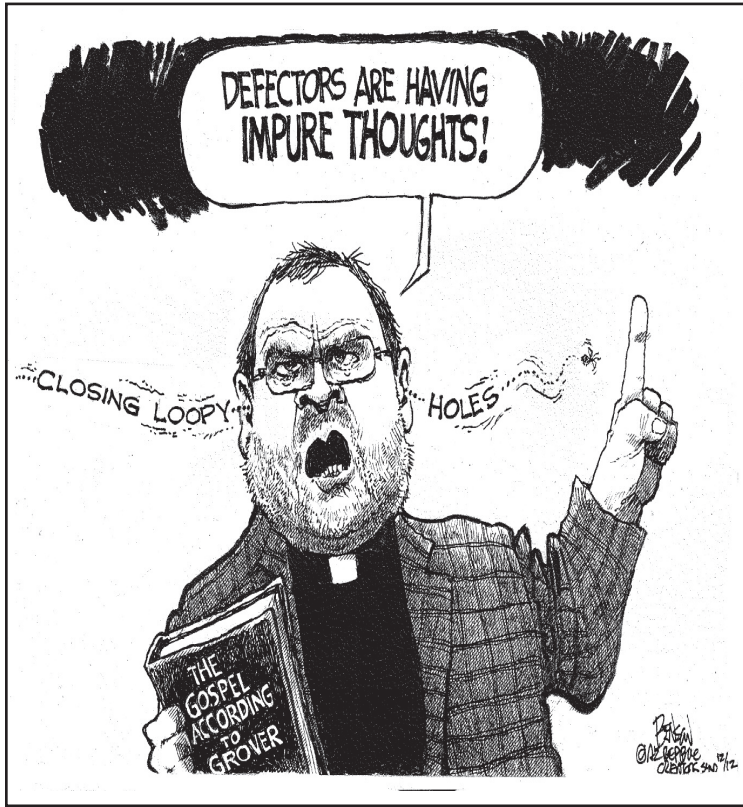

A pet should never be ignored because an owner is too tired or busy. And owners, including children, should know how and when to provide food, water, care, companionship and exercise for animals.

Cost is another factor. Licenses, food, grooming and veterinary care costs need to be considered besides paying for spaying or neutering, which is extremely important.

Other things to ponder include suitable living arrangements for a pet, caring for a pet while on vacation and training classes.

Stop and think about why many older animals live at shelters. They are there because someone didn't take responsibility.

The playful whimpers may draw many to four-legged friends this time of year, but we're asking area residents with pleading children to research the best possible pet options. Study up on the basics of animal care. In the end, you and your family will be rewarded for your efforts in providing a caring home for a pet for many years to come.

Republicans seem ready to join big government agenda

leaders offering to help the president spend us into oblivion?

I suspected that those questions might be asked when Mitt Romney was nominated to oppose Obama. My view of his campaign then and now has been that he presented a choice to the voters of big government versus bigger government, and bigger government prevailed. Romney argued during the campaign that he was at a disadvantage because the president had distributed federal tax dollars to persons and groups critical to his reelection. He has since argued that he lost the election because nearly half of Americans -- some by chance, some by choice and some by force -- are dependent on government for much of their income or subsistence.

His argument sounds harsh, but it's true.

A formerly working and now retired couple in their mid-80s who are receiving monthly payments from the Social Security Administration into which they were forced to make payments while they were working can hardly be considered slackers. But they can be considered dupes. All of us who have fallen for the government's nonsense about it holding our money for our future use have been duped. The government doesn't hold anyone's money for him. It spends whatever it collects as soon as it receives it. When its entitlement bills come due, it uses current tax revenue, or it borrows money in order to acquire the cash to make the payments.

The president knows this. Congress knows it. The courts have endorsed it. In endorsing it, the courts have held that the government's decision to pay entitlements is a political, not a legal, one. Stated differently, the federal government has no legal obligation to pay any money to any Social Security or Medicare or Medicaid applicant. That's why those who have relied on the political wisdom of politicians, rather than their own prudential judgment, are dupes. Let me rephrase that: Those who have permitted politicians to use the force of law to compel us all to contribute our hard-earned income to a bankrupt government Ponzi scheme are dupes if they think this can work without end.

When FDR first proposed his Social Security scheme, he knew that only force and du-licity would get enough people into the system to generate the cash flow at the entry side of the Ponzi scheme to make it salable to Congress and to the American people. LBJ knew the same was the case for his expansions of Social Security with Medicare and Medicaid. What LBJ probably did not anticipate is that health insurers would largely cease offering products of primary insurance to seniors, and thus seniors would require the government entitlements into which they had mistakenly believed they were contributing, because the government would become the only game in town.

Now that the emperor has no clothes, and we are confronting more and more seniors who have been lulled into this false sense of security, and fewer young workers are even entering the job market, the government's voracious need for cash is difficult to fulfill. Earlier this year, when members of both parties in Congress recognized this ticking time bomb, they agreed to address it by punting. Now, that punted political football is falling to the earth, and no one wants to catch it. The punt they bequeathed to themselves is a tax increase for everyone and reductions in spending that even they find to be odious. The odor they dislike is the realization, to paraphrase Margaret Thatcher, that they are running out of other people's money.

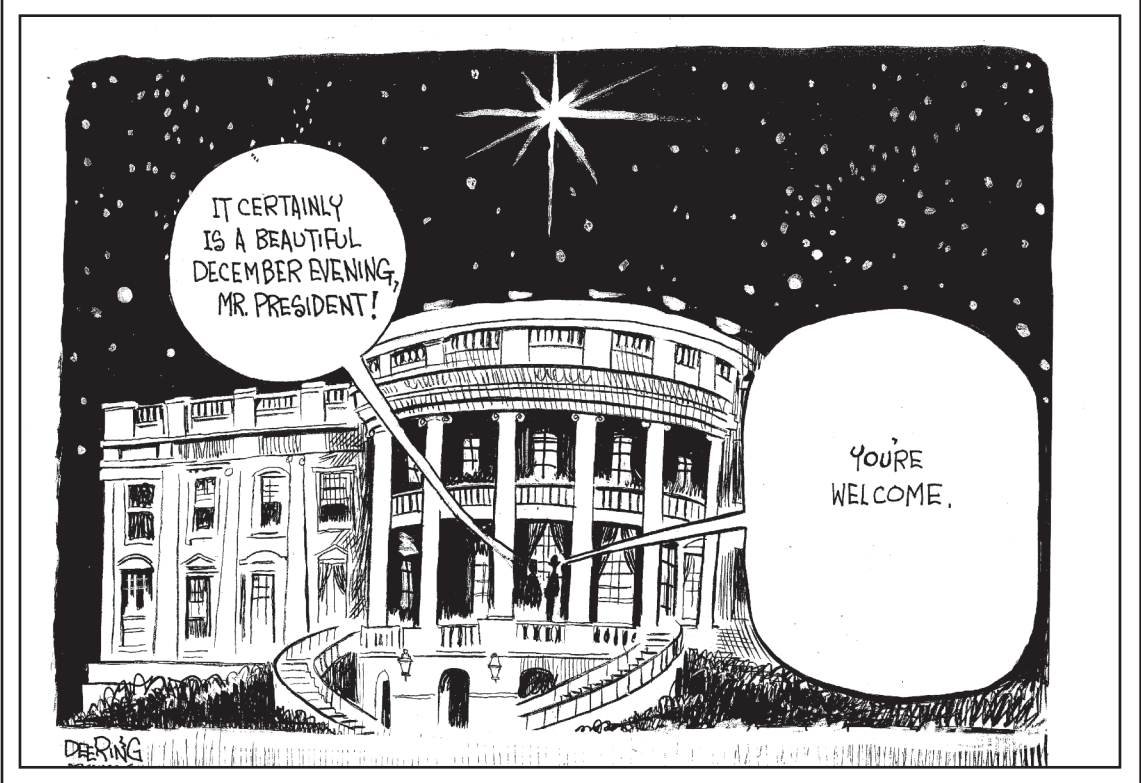

The president was re-elected on promises of more of the same: more borrowing, more spending and new taxes on the rich. The Republicans who got elected did so on promises of lessened spending and no new taxes, to paraphrase George H.W. Bush. The president, who is the most liberal president since Woodrow Wilson, is largely ignorant of economics 101. But his ignorance is consistent with his beliefs that the feds can continue to spend more than they collect and continue to borrow without ever repaying.

The Republicans in the House are largely more conservative than at any time since Wilson left office. One would expect them to understand the intent of the voters who sent them there and thus say no to more taxes, no to more spending and no to more borrowing. Instead we have Republican leadership in the House that actually proposed raising more revenue by eliminating deductions on income taxes. They somehow claim that they are being faithful to their stated mission of fiscal conservatism by making you pay more money but at the present tax rates. They, too, have failed economics 101.

Any significant movement of wealth from taxpayers to tax consumers will not enhance prosperity; it will crush it, and it will breed dependence on a government that is fiscally out of control. But the recipients will no doubt vote to re-elect those who gave them these payments.

Republicans in panic mode

MARK SHIELDS

Sen. Jim DeMint, the uncompromising South Carolina conservative whose average personal net worth of $40,501 made him, according to the respected Center for Public Integrity, the fourth-poorest member of the Senate, will resign his seat at the end of the year to become president of The Heritage Foundation.

Although no salary terms have been announced, the man whom DeMint will succeed has been paid more than a million dollars a year, and it's a good bet that Jim DeMint, who is earning $174,000 a year as a senator, will get a raise to somewhere in seven figures.

The DeMint news came right on the heels of an exclusive report in Mother Jones magazine that former Republican House Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas had resigned as chairman of FreedomWorks, one of the prominent political operations in the conservative movement with strong tea party ties. Reportedly, Armey's severance package will leave him richer by $8 million.

Talk about striking gold. The financial windfalls visited upon these two conservative true-believers recalls the line about the congregationalist missionaries in Hawaii who seemed to find more personal prosperity than converts: "They came to do good and did very, very well!"

But if you want to know the terribly sad state of today's Republican Party, you just have to look at the treatment of Bob Dole, who was both the presidential and the vice presidential nominee of the GOP, in addition to being his party's Senate leader as well as its national chairman.

But long before he was a national leader, he was 2nd Lt. Bob Dole on April 14, 1945, in the hills of Italy, when a German shell tore through his right shoulder and broke his neck and spine. He had been a 6-foot-2-inch, 194-pound athlete, and after losing 70 pounds and having his body temperature rise to 108.7 degrees, he forced himself through 39 months of painful rehabilitation to learn all over again how to use the toilet, how to eat, how to wash and dress himself, and how to walk. His painfully thin right arm, some 2.5 inches shorter than his left, has been limp for 67 years.

In 1990, Bob Dole pushed the Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA) to Senate passage. President George H.W. Bush supported and signed into law the historic legislation, which has changed the face of America and the fate of millions of Americans.

Twenty-two years later, we now take for granted the wheelchair ramps in and out of our buildings, the wider doorways for greater access, the curb-cuts that remove obstacles. The ADA welcomes citizens with disabilities fully into the nation's academic, civic, social and economic life.

The Convention on the Rights of Persons With Disabilities, inspired by and modeled after the ADA, was negotiated and signed by the administration of President George W. Bush in 2006. One hundred fifty-four countries have signed this treaty, and 126 countries have already ratified it. The treaty would require no change in U.S. law, but would provide the framework and incentive for other countries to recognize and guarantee, as the United States already does, the rights of all people with disabilities.

Twenty-one veterans organizations, including the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Wounded Warriors Project -- along with 30 religious and interfaith groups -- endorse ratification by the U.S. Senate.

But last Tuesday, Senate Republicans caved to baseless, irrational fears about black helicopters parachuting blue-helmeted U.N. troops into American neighborhoods to punish homeschooling parents or shutter religious schools. With a wheelchair-bound Bob Dole on the Senate floor urging just 13 Republicans to join all the Democrats and provide the two-thirds Senate vote needed to ratify, all but eight of the Republican senators rejected the plea of their former leader and American hero.

Why? Because they're scared of a primary challenge from the right. That's why. America, Bob Dole, Abraham Lincoln's party and 700 million of our fellow human beings with disabilities all deserve better.

Nov. 29

The New York Times on the investigation of Britain's journalism practices and freedom of the press.

Millions of Britons were justifiably outraged over last year's serial revelations of illegal and unethical behavior by the powerful and influential tabloid press in Britain. But the regulatory remedies proposed by an official commission of inquiry seem misplaced, excessive and potentially dangerous to Britain's centuries-old traditions of a press free from government regulation.

In a nearly 2,000-page report, the commission, led by Lord Justice Sir Brian Leveson, cataloged the glaring misdeeds of Rupert Murdoch's sensationalist tabloid, The News of the World, which is no longer published.

Noting, among other things, the tabloid's "reckless disregard for accuracy," and "lack of respect for individual privacy," it called on Parliament to create an independent regulatory body with the authority to fine newspapers up to $1.6 million for violating its guidelines. This new organization, which newspapers could join voluntarily, would replace the largely ineffective Press Complaints Commission, run by the news industry itself, which is supposed to uphold a code of ethical journalistic practices agreed to by participating publications.

Creating an independent regulatory body would require new legislation. To his credit, Prime Minister David Cameron seems opposed to proceeding in that direction. Conscientious members of all political parties should oppose it as well. ...

British newspapers operate in a harsher legal environment than the American press. They must navigate an Official Secrets Act, which criminalizes the publication of classified information and a plaintiff-friendly libel law, which lacks American-style exceptions for public figures. But they have been free from government licensing since 1694. A regulatory panel backed by law is a big step in the wrong direction. ...

Goshen police work to update mutual aid pacts

By KEVIN HOWELL
Staff Writer

GOSHEN TOWNSHIP— The Goshen Police District updated its mutual aid agreement with the Sebring Police Department at the regular meeting of township trustees Monday night.

The trustees approved the update to the agreement which hadn't been current since 1999, according to Chief Steve McDaniel. The updated agreement is a standard mutual aid agreement in which both departments provide assistance to the other at no cost.

McDaniel said that he is currently attempting to work out new agreements with the Perry Township Police Department and the Columbiana County Sheriff's Office, both of which have expired agreements. He noted that officers still assist other departments in emergencies even without the current mutual aid agreements.

In other business, the trustees approved the promotion of police officer David Yohman from reserve to part-time effective Dec. 16 and approved the purchase of a 2013 Chevy Tahoe police cruiser from Stratton Chevrolet for $23,270 after trade-in.

The trustees also tabled discussion regarding roof repairs at the Administration Building to further investigate what should be done. Road Foreman Jim Stryffeler provided quotes from two companies for the project which currently includes repair of two sections of flat roof, patching over the gym and resealing the gym windows. Since neither company would be able to start the project soon, according to Stryffeler, the trustees opted to consider the matter a little more.

Also at the meeting, Recycling Coordinator Paul Manypenny reported that the township in 2012 generated 4,560 pounds of material at the scrap drive, 164 tires at the tire drive, 2,583 pounds at the electronic drive, over 6,000 pounds of overflow and $503.83 in aluminum cans.

The year end meeting is scheduled for 5 p.m. Dec. 28 and the reorganizational meeting for 9 a.m. Jan. 5, both at the Administration Building.

Panezott said the new radio tower seems to be working, with radio reception better in areas where they were having problems. He said there's still some fine tuning and tweaking to do.

In police business, the trustees approved a $2,000 contract with Creative Microsystems Inc. of Englewood, Ohio at the request of Police Chief Mike Emigh to give the department the ability to continue running license plates and get information on warrants and wanted people through their laptop computers and a station in the office.

Emigh explained that the department had been receiving the access service for free the past two years through grant funding from the Department of Homeland Security, but funding was cut off for 2013, requiring the township to now pick up the tab.

He said he would have preferred they continue to contract with the company the department uses now, Armada iLines, but the county Sheriff's Office is switching to CMI. They wouldn't be able to communicate through the laptops with the Sheriff's Office without the same provider.

The contract with CMI covers all their computers and tech support for one year.

Emigh said in the two years under the free program, they were able to run more than 115,000 license plates. He said for what they get out of the service, it's worth the $2,000. The new contract begins Jan. 1, with the old one expiring Dec. 31, so they won't lose service.

The trustees also approved moving Patrolman Channing Hank and Patrolman Joshua Hall from training status to probationary status, pending completion of a written test.

In other business, Trustee Don Kendrick, who also serves as the township zoning officer, promised to check on a property to see what's going on there after a resident asked some questions about zoning.

Barb Fink, who lives on Beechwood Road, specifically was asking whether there was any commercial zoning in the area of Beechwood and Goshen Road, saying one house had about 14 vehicles there and it looked like there was a business being operated there.

Both Kendrick and Mix said the first 300 feet of frontage is residential, then the rest is agricultural on both streets. Emigh commented that he also had reason to believe a business was being operated there and that the resident had been working on cars when he lived on another road in the township.

In preparing for the new year, the board approved temporary appropriations of $258,500 to cover the first three months of 2013 and reappointed Doug Sampson to the Zoning Board and Ron Poage to the Board of Zoning Appeals, both for five-year terms.

The trustees will not meet again until they reorganize at 6:30 p.m. Jan. 7. They decided to cancel their second meeting of the month since it would fall on Christmas Eve.

State grant to fund study of methods for public assistance clients to send information

By TOM GIAMBRONI
Staff Writer

LISBON — Columbiana County will be among 23 county welfare agencies that could benefit from a state grant to explore ways that public assistance applicants can send personal information from off-site locations.

The Ohio Development Services Agency announced last week a $100,000 grant had been issued to the Columbiana County Department of Job and Family Services (JFS), with the funding source being the Local Government Innovation Fund, which was established to award grants to government agencies looking for ways to deliver services more efficiently.

County JFS Director Eileen Dray-Bardon explained the local JFS served as the applicant on behalf of the other 22 because she is currently president of the Canton district of county JFS agencies.

She said the grant will fund a study to determine the feasibility of creating locations throughout the 23 counties where public assistance applicants can transmit follow-up personal information needed to complete the application process, instead of traveling to the main offices.

While initial public assistance applications can be made online, copies of additional personal information must be provided and there is currently no secure way to do that without coming in person to the JFS office in Lisbon.

Dray-Bardon said the idea is to set up user-friendly, self-serve scanner sites at locations where the JFS has a working relationship, such as food pantries, public libraries and local hospitals. Public assistance applicants would be able to go there and scan copies of their personal documents and transmit it to the JFS. This is not only more convenient but it would speed up the application process.

“The study is to see if we can make it simple enough that they do it themselves ... There's always a certain percentage of our clientele who cannot do this, but there is probably a whole lot who can,” she said. tgiambroni@mojonews.com

Experts: Drilling can be made cleaner

PITTSBURGH (AP) — In the Colorado mountains, a spike in air pollution has been linked to a boom in oil and gas drilling. A thousand miles away on the plains of north Texas, there's a drilling boom, too, but some air pollution levels have declined. Opponents of drilling point to Colorado and say it's dangerous. Companies point to Texas and say drilling is safe.

The answer appears to be that drilling can be safe or it can be dangerous. Industry practices, enforcement, geography and even snow cover can minimize or magnify air pollution problems.

“It's like a vehicle. Some cars drip oil,” said Russell Schnell, deputy director of the federal Earth System Research Laboratory in Boulder, Colo. “You have wells that are absolutely tight. And you have other places where a valve gives out, and you have huge leaks.”

The good news, nearly all sides agree, is that the technology exists to control methane gas leaks and other air pollution associated with drilling. The bad news is that the industry is booming so rapidly that some companies and some regulators can't seem to get ahead of the problems, which could ultimately cost billions of dollars to remedy.

The worries about what drilling does to the air are both global and local, with scientists concerned about the effects on climate change as well as the possible health consequences from breathing smog, soot and other pollutants.

Hydraulic fracturing, or fracking, has made it possible to tap into deep reserves of oil and gas but has also raised concerns about pollution. The industry and many federal and state officials say the practice is safe when done properly, but environmental groups and some scientists say there hasn't been enough research.

Some environmentalists say if leaks and pollution can be minimized, the boom has benefits, since gas burns much cleaner than coal, emitting half the carbon dioxide.

Al Gore told The Associated Press that it's “not irresponsible” to look at gas as a short-term substitute for coal-fired electricity. But Gore added that the main component of gas, methane, is a more potent heat-trapping greenhouse gas than CO2. That means that if large quantities leak, the advantage over coal disappears, the former vice president said.

In Colorado, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration estimated that 4 percent of methane was leaking from wells, far more than previously estimated, and that people who live near production areas may be exposed to worrisome levels of benzene and other toxic compounds present in oil and gas.

Across the industry, the technology for stopping leaks can be as simple as fixing seals and gaskets, or it can involve hundreds of millions of dollars of new construction.

“I think it's totally fixable,” Schnell said. “At least the bigger companies, they are really on top of this.”

Gore added that when companies capture leaking methane, they end up with more to sell. “So there's an economic incentive to capture it and stop the leaking,” he said.

Another major source of worry is the industry's practice of burning off, or flaring, natural gas that comes out of the ground as a byproduct of oil drilling. Over the past five years, the U.S. has increased the amount of flared and wasted gas more than any other nation, though Russia still burns off far more than any other country.

PATROL

- Dean A. Kibler, 55, Mechanicstown Road, Hanoverton, was eastbound on U.S. 62 in Knox Township at 5 p.m. Friday and came to a sudden stop and was struck from behind by Molly S. Benedetti, 23, Salem Grange Road, Salem. Benedetti was cited for assured clear distance ahead.
- Louis E. Gilbert, 70, Youngstown, was eastbound on state Route 14 in Unity Township at 1:45 p.m. Thursday and went off the right side and hit a culvert and a utility pole before coming to rest in a ditch. He was taken to St. Elizabeth Hospital with non-incapacitating injuries and charges are pending.
- Amy J. Webber, 33, state Route 46, New Waterford, was eastbound on Bye Road and Richard D. Roush, 66, Bye Road, East Palestine, pulled out of a private drive and struck her vehicle. He was cited for right of way.
- Sean M. Heim, 34, Depot Road, Lisbon, was north-eastbound on Teegarden Road in Salem at 8:10 p.m. Wednesday and slid off the right side of the road and hit a utility pole. He was cited for failure to control.
- Jeanette L. Philo, 39, Mantle Road, East Rochester, was northbound on Augusta Road in West Township at 6:50 a.m. Thursday and went off the right side of the road

- and hit a utility pole. She was cited for failure to control.
- Caleb D. Cunningham, 20, state Route 518, Lisbon, was northbound on County Airport Road in Madison Township at 2 p.m. Dec. 4 and drove off the right side of the road and hit a ditch, a culvert and a wire fence. He was cited for failure to control and seat belt.
- Donald A. Nape, 40, Canton Road, Carrollton, was westbound on state Route 644 in Hanover Township at 1:10 p.m. Dec. 3 and stopped at the U.S. 30 intersection and attempted to turn right onto U.S. 30 and the tractor-trailer went off the right side of the road and struck a light support post.
- Jason M. Pfaff, 32, Alliance, and Curtis M. Lemley, 43, New Cumberland, W.Va., were southbound on Knox School Road in Knox Township at 11:30 a.m. Dec. 2. Lemley's vehicle became disabled and was stopped in the road and Pfaff failed to stop and struck it from behind. Pfaff was cited for assured clear distance ahead.
- James Lee Palmer, 28, Clarksburg, W.Va., was westbound on state Route 558 in Salem at 5 a.m. Dec. 3 and went off the left side of the road and hit an embankment. He was cited for failure to control and later went to Salem Hospital for possible injuries.

BUFFER FROM 1A

Butcher Road extending south to the corporation line.

Residents had expressed concern over having an apartment complex nearby, whether there were plans to extend their streets out to the apartment complex and whether it could devalue their properties. After agreeing to forward the first zoning change to council, the Planning Commission on its own agreed to study the idea of rezoning land 300 feet east of the deadends on those streets from residential multi-family to residential single-family as a means to protect the residents.

The final decision on both zoning issues will rest with Salem City Council. Council and the Planning Commission will hold a joint meeting at 7 p.m. Dec. 18 regarding the zoning issues.

During the previous meeting, Hada said there was no plan to build on the wetlands to the west of the high tension wires near the deadend streets because of the topography of the land and the wetlands. There's a gradual 60-foot drop east of the deadend streets. There was also no plan to have the deadend streets extended. Both points were reiterated during Monday's meeting.

Kennedy Drive resident Mark Pietrzak questioned how the Planning Commission could approve a rezoning change without seeing a comprehensive plan for the entire parcel of nearly 70 acres, including the infrastructure needs for water and sewer and how streets would be connected.

He also said he thought they should rescind their previous decision to change the commercial zone to multiple family, asking that the commission study and evaluate how the building plan will affect existing neighborhoods and the city's ability to provide the infrastructure. He said there should be deed restrictions to protect the citizens and the neighborhoods.

City Planning and Zoning Officer Patrick Morrissey said the city has never required deed restrictions, with Mayor John Berlin adding that it's usually up to the property owner. Commission member Royal Schiller said it's not the essence of the Planning Commission to do the business of the property owner.

Morrissey, Panezott and commission member Barb Loudon all said there was no proposal asking for the deadend streets to be extended out. Pietrzak said the water lines need connected to the new development, saying he has a problem with the deadend water. He also said they should extend the sewer lines on the deadend streets to a lift station talked about for the property.

“This has nothing to do with the NRP project. They can't be forced to fix our infrastructure,” Morrissey said. Oak Street resident Tom Scahill pointed out that when he attended the previous meeting, there were no plans for developing anything west of the creek on the vacant land near the wetlands. He questioned the need to re-zone the area to single family.

Both Panezott and Berlin tried to explain the idea of the buffer zone, noting that there's no plan to build anything in the zone. By changing the zoning, at least they're ensuring that nothing can be built there except for single family homes if someone decided to build something there.

“I don't hear anyone saying they're against progress in Salem. Let's just do it the right way,” Kennedy Drive resident Russ Sutherin said.

He said he would like to see something in writing from NRP that nothing would be built in the buffer zone. He also asked that they put in extra buffers of trees or bushes.

Councilwoman Cyndi Baronzzi Dickey, who lives on Southeast Boulevard off of Edgewood and represents the Fourth Ward area affected by the potential development, said the residents would like to see the change from RA to RS-2 permanent, but Berlin said that wouldn't be fair to the current owner. After two years, if the plans fall through, both zoning areas will revert back to their original zoning as requested by the current owner.

MUNICIPAL

LISBON — In Columbiana County Municipal Court Monday, a Jan. 17 pretrial was set for Nathan E. Steer, 26, U.S. Route 62, Damascus, charged with two counts assault and one count each of criminal damaging, driving under a child support suspension, obstructing official business and a seat belt violation. One assault charge is from an alleged attack on his ex-girlfriend, Ashley Metzgar, in her home on Sept. 28. The second is from allegedly going after Stephanie L. Reed on June 24 when she said she was calling 911 and throwing her phone to the pavement.

Dannie R. Hawthorne, 52, Indian Run Drive, Canfield, was fined $500 driving under a child support suspension amended from driving under suspension.

Brian W. Yeager, 50, Salineville Road, Mechanicstown, was fined $350, had his license suspended for six months and required 25 hours community service for marked lanes and reckless operation amended from OVI first offense.

Carolyn L. Rutan, 39, Canton, was fined $300 for driving under suspension and driving under FRA suspension.

Ryan N. Nyardy, 32, Union Street, Columbiana, was fined $200 for squeal and peel and unsafe vehicle amended from speeding.

Chassity Wilson, 23, Greentree Place, Lisbon, was fined $200 for wrongful entrustment.

Khbair A. Tisdale, 31, Gaston Place, East Liverpool, was fined $160 for driving without a valid license, seat belt violation and failure to yield.

James N. Harlin, 41, Peninsula, was fined $150 for speeding.

William J. Mence III, 44, Turtle Creek, Pa., was fined $150 for unsafe vehicle amended from a stop sign violation.

Savannah M. Young, 26, East South Range Road, North Lima, was fined $130 for speeding and driving under FRA suspension amended from driving under suspension.

A felony passing bad checks charge against Michael J. Bilas, 53, Pleasant Valley Court, Salem, was dismissed with prejudice. Bilas had been accused of writing a $3,185 check to Chris Marquis for diesel fuel in June and the check bounced.

A Dec. 17 pretrial was set for James R. Ray Jr., 32, North Lincoln Avenue, Salem, charged with domestic violence for allegedly grabbing his fiancée, Tabettha Phillis, by the throat, choking her and banging her head off the floor several times.

A Dec. 20 pretrial was set for Gary Mason Jr., 38, Nevada Street, Wellsville, charged with theft, obstructing official business, criminal mischief and aggravated menacing. Court documents allege on Dec. 2 Mason broke into a vehicle in the trailer park on state Route 39 in Wellsville to take change and then ran from police. Additionally, on Dec. 4 Mason allegedly sent a threatening text message to Brandon J. Zepernick in Perry Township.

A Jan. 3 pretrial was set for Joshua Ryan Ayers, 22, Aliquippa, Pa., charged with OVI first offense, speeding, seat belt, drug paraphernalia and possession of instruments to ingest or inhale a controlled substance.

A Jan. 7 pretrial was set for Brian S. Goodlin, 30, Chester, W.Va., charged with falsification for allegedly giving police the name and social security of his brother William L. Goodlin, when questioned by a deputy on Sunday. He was then arrested by the sheriff's department on a warrant under the name of William L. Goodlin II.

‘Twas the Night Before’ 5k set in Firestone Park Saturday
COLUMBIANA — The Siembida and Boggs Philanthropic Foundation is sponsoring the ‘Twas the Night Before’ 5k in Firestone Park at 5 p.m. Saturday. This race will have runners and walkers alike racing through Firestone Park while it is lit up with one million Christmas lights courtesy of the Joy of Christmas light show. Runners will receive a free entry to the light show the evening of the race. Monetary proceeds from the race will benefit the restoration of the track surrounding the football field in the park. Registration is currently available at www.active.com or by printing out an application at www.SandBFoundation.org.
Race day registration begins at 3:30 p.m. at Pavilion #1.
In addition to raising money, the foundation is collecting toys and non-perishable foods to benefit the Adopt-A-Family Christmas Program at the Way Station in Columbiana. Saturday is the deadline for donations to be dropped off in pavilion #1. In addition to toys these children are also in need of clothing. According to Carla Sukosd, Way Station program chairperson, “Twens and teens are often not adopted and sometimes receive very little.” In addition to a few specific unnamed families the S & B Foundation is adopting, the foundation is aiming to find items for the tween and teen age groups. Gift cards to places like Target, Old Navy and Kohl’s were suggested as favorites.

“We are collecting non-perishable foods of all types, not just canned foods to donate to the Way Station,” said Crystal Siembida Boggs. The food items will be given to the families in need during the December food giveaway. For more information or to drop off donations call 330-482-9105.

New Year’s Eve Victory Gospel Jubilee tickets offered
NORTH LIMA — Free tickets are available for the New Year’s Eve Victory Gospel Jubilee to be held on Dec. 31 at the North Lima Business Complex Auditorium.
National southern gospel artist Jerry Garcia will be the headliner for the evening of music hosted by the Golden Street Singers. Also on the program will be the Stillwater trio. Garcia, who has been in the music ministry since he sang his first song in church as a young boy, performs hundreds of concerts each year, sings on gospel cruises and has appeared at the National Quartet Convention. Garcia and his wife, Sarah, share a special ministry of love to children with severe, even terminal illness.

Stillwater members Ed and Ed Woodard have been singing in groups for more than 30 years. They are joined by lead singer Enola Grovesteen. The Golden Street Singers have hosted all of the Victory Gospel Jubilees.
A buffet dinner by the Hen House Cafe will be available from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Cost is $12. Singing begins at 7 p.m. Reservations for dinner can be made when you order your free tickets. Alliance Hospital’s Care Center aids Sandy victims ALLIANCE — The residents at Alliance Community Hospital’s Community Care Center (CCC) are making a difference in the lives of others this holiday season. After Hurricane Sandy devastated the East Coast, residents were determined to find a way to help those affected. Throughout November, they sold Otis Spunkmeyer Cookies in the CCC main activity room to raise money. The money raised by the residents was recently donated to the Hurricane Sandy Relief Fund at the Union Avenue Methodist Church.
“Every two to three months the residents do a community outreach project,” said Lori Underwood, CCC activity director. “They feel very blessed and want to help those who may be going through difficult times.”

Salem Area Amateur Radio Association offers classes
SALEM — The Salem Area Amateur Radio Association is sponsoring entry level ham radio classes starting Jan. 14 at 7 p.m. at the home of Ginger Grilli, 1530 E. State St. Salem. Those interested are asked to call 330-337-7225 or 330-549-3051.

Ohio Valley College of Technology collects pet supplies

EAST LIVERPOOL — The Ohio Valley College of Technology is offering residents a drop-off point for donations to the Columbiana County Dog Pound and for the local humane society in its second annual “Kitty and Doggie Drive.”
The dog pound, located at 8455 County Home Road in Lisbon, is roughly 20 miles from the East Liverpool area while the Columbiana County Humane Society is about 25 miles at its location at 1825 S. Lincoln Ave., Salem.
“Last year, our big-hearted residents, staff, and students brought in more than 400 items and donated almost $600,” said Donna Juszczak, OVCT events coordinator. “Many people took advantage of a southern Columbiana County drop-off point for the dogs and the dog pound personnel.”
The donated items, ranging from food to blankets to cleaning supplies, went directly toward the care of the canines. All the money collected last year went into a

Students and staff gather around Charlie and her owner, Donna Juszczak of Calcutta, at the Ohio Valley College of Technology. Charlie was rescued from the Columbiana County Dog Pound about two years ago. The college will be a donation drop-off point for the dog pound and the Columbiana County Humane Society. Gathered around Charlie and Juszczak are (clockwise) Carolyn Grimes of Salem, instructor; and students Rachael Milnes of Beaver Falls, Chelsea Beadle of Salineville, Mallory Logston of Salineville, Heather Anderson of Rogers, Nikki Leake of East Palestine, and John Shepler of Midland. B&B Bicycle Shop owner keeps ‘em rolling and likes ‘to make people happy’

Henry Simmons bought the B&B Bike Shop in 1985, and since then has been keeping Alliance in wheels at the only locally-owned, full-service bicycle shop in Alliance. Simmons sells and repairs most any bicycle ever made. He enjoys working with wheeled items and has also developed skills in wheelchair repair. He will always take a look at wheelchairs to see if they are able to be repaired. His shop caters “to the pocketbook of the people of Alliance,” carrying bicycles that run anywhere from a $20 used affair to just more than $400. The shop is a mecca for those searching for bicycle parts, new wheels, innovative accessories, and solid bikes. We have BMX, mountain bikes, new and used, and English racing bikes out in the shed. Over the years, customer base has been primarily male, but women have been coming in more as the years go by. We encourage our customers, particularly if they happen to be children, to invest in a good bicycle helmet. We have an unusual bicycle which stands as a sample in the store, designed by a woman during her pregnancy called “Rebike 818” and encourages women to remain physically fit, particularly during their nine-month sojourn through life creation.

Injured Irving cleared to play

After missing ten games, Cavs PG will return to practice

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sitting and watching his teammates play was torture for Kyrie Irving. Seeing the Cavaliers lose made it worse.

Back earlier than expected, Irving was cleared to practice after missing 11 games with a broken left finger and the star point guard will likely play Tuesday night when Cleveland hosts the struggling Los Angeles Lakers.

"It's been very difficult," Irving said after Monday's practice. "But I've gotten a chance to really break down the game and it's given me a chance to get a different outlook being on the sideline. I'm really happy to be out there and be competing again."

The Cavs are thrilled to have him back.

Cleveland went just 2-9 without last season's rookie of the year, who broke his finger Nov. 17 in a game against Dallas. He played the following night at Philadelphia before medical tests revealed a non-displaced fracture. The Cavs thought Irving would be out for at least one month, but he's returning after just three weeks. Irving will play with a protective splint on his finger, but said the brace won't affect his play.

While he was sidelined, Irving kept in shape with cardio workouts he says he won't miss.

"They were killing me behind the scenes," he said. "I definitely stayed in shape over the last two weeks. I needed it and it felt good."

With the Cavs just 4-17 and riding a five-game losing streak, coach Byron Scott said the news that Irving was ready to return was just what the team needed.

"I think all the guys are looking forward to having him back out there because he does make most of our guys' jobs a lot easier because he can create so much for himself and for his teammates," Scott said.

There's no doubt the Cavs will benefit having Irving's

Steelers search for consistency

Suffer fourth loss to sub .500 team

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Casey Hampton believes greatness is still within reach for the Pittsburgh Steelers, even if at the moment the only thing Hampton's team has a firm grasp on is maddening inconsistency.

"Going forward I feel like we're going to win every game," the veteran nose tackle said. "That's what we've got to do to get in the playoffs."

Better than that try to rely on the kind of help the Steelers received on Sunday, when a demoralizing 34-24 home loss to San Diego did minimal damage to their postseason hopes. Pittsburgh ended the day in the same position it began, holding onto the AFC's final wild card spot.

The grip, however, is sure to get slippery if things don't turn around quickly.

"We can't be happy just because other teams lost and

Shurmur asserts that he's not interested in saving his job

BEREA (AP) — The Browns are still mathematically alive in the AFC playoff hunt. It's a longshot, but they haven't been eliminated with three games remaining.

But with every win, Pat Shurmur's odds of returning as Cleveland's coach improve.

He hasn't been eliminated either.

With his team riding a three-game winning streak — the Browns' longest since 2009 — Shurmur feels good about the progress of his young team, which is finally showing an ability to finish games after so many close losses earlier this season.

But despite the good vibes emanating from one of the NFL's youngest teams, there remains uncertainty about the future.

Swirling around Shurmur are rumors and reports, one on the weekend involving Alabama coach Nick Saban, that the Browns intend to make a coaching change. The clock seems to be ticking on Shurmur, who insists he's not focused on anything but getting his team ready to play their next game.

"Listen, I'm not worried about any of that," Shurmur said Monday. "I'm not worried about saving, I'm worried about doing my job and that's it. I just want to do my job."

Shurmur will have at least three more games to strengthen his case to return, starting Sunday against the Washington Redskins, who won't know until later this week if they'll have rookie quarterback Robert Griffin III. He sustained a mild sprain of a ligament in the right knee against Baltimore and it's too early to know if he'll be ready.

After starting 0-5, the Browns (5-8) have turned their season around, and Sunday's 30-7 blowout win

United knocks off East Palestine

Crestview cruises past Jackson Milton

EAST PALESTINE — Courtney Hydrick tallied 19 points as United kept its hot start going with a 69-36 win over East Palestine on Monday.

The Eagles (5-0, 2-0) were up 28-1 after a quarter and cruised from there.

Sam Spitler added 13 points.

"The girls came out focused to do a job tonight and did what they needed to do," United coach Sam Mathias said. "We have a tough stretch of games with the top three teams in the league coming up (Springfield, Crestview, South Range) and needed to learn to set a tone and improve our games. I'm very proud of the girls tonight."

Brooke Gedeon had 13 points for the Bulldogs. Courtney Weber added 11 points.

United hosts Springfield on Thursday, while East Palestine travels to Crestview on Thursday.

Reds sign Ryan Ludwick

Signs two-year deal to stay with Cincinnati

Cincinnati Reds outfielder Ryan Ludwick signed a two-year, $15 million contract to remain with the Reds for the next two seasons. (AP Photo)

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ryan Ludwick left the Reds to see if there was a better deal available on the free agent market. He found at least one, but turned it down to stay with Cincinnati.

The left fielder signed a two-year, $15 million deal on Monday that includes a mutual option for the 2015 season. He agreed to the contract over the weekend and came for the formal announcement.

The 34-year-old outfielder batted .275 with 26 homers and 80 RBIs in 125 games last season, when he started 107 times in left field. After first baseman Joey Votto got hurt at midseason, Ludwick emerged as one of the team's most consistent run producers, helping the Reds win the NL Central for the second time in three years.

"I think ultimately I've always wanted to prove that one All-Star year wasn't a fluke and I can be an All-Star again," said Ludwick, an All-Star with St. Louis in 2008. "The ultimate goal would be to win a World Series. That's one of the reasons I came back here. I think we have guys in place one through nine (in the batting order). We brought back pretty much the whole team."

Ludwick hit three homers during the Reds' first-round loss to the San Francisco Giants in the playoffs.

He came to Cincinnati on a one-year, $2 million deal for 2012 that included a mutual option for 2013 at $5 million. Instead, he took a $500,000 buyout, interested in seeing what other teams would offer. General manager Walt Jocketty made an offer, then waited to see what Ludwick decided.

"He had several clubs chasing after him, two or three in particular that would have been attractive places," Jocketty said. "At least one had more money on the table. I think it's a credit to Ryan that we tried to make a deal that was fair, that we felt comfortable with."

Ludwick struggled in the first half of the season. When Votto needed knee surgery and missed 48 games, Ludwick became one of Cincinnati's top hitters, batting .340 with 12 homers and 36 RBIs while the first baseman recovered. Jock-

Patriots rout Texans 42-14 in key AFC matchup

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. (AP) — Look out. That familiar sight is the New England Patriots romping through December, looking like a Super Bowl team.

The Patriots rolled over Houston 42-14 on Monday night, stamping themselves once again as the team to fear in the AFC — and making the Texans look like pretenders.

Tom Brady threw for four touchdowns and 296 yards as New England manhandled the team with the league's best record. The Patriots (10-3), who already own the AFC East title, won their seventh straight and moved one game behind the Texans (11-2) for the conference's top seed.

A matchup of the top two scoring teams in the league was a mismatch from the outset. It took take New England only one possession to start its scoring barrage as the Patriots surpassed their average of 35.8 points per game.

Wes Welker's 31-yard punt return and 25-yard reception — the 107th straight game he's had a catch — led to Aaron Hernandez's 7-yard score. That gave Brady 45 consecutive games with a TD pass, third longest in NFL history.

It also set the tone.

Houston, which had won six straight, threatened on its next series, only to have

New England Patriots tight end Aaron Hernandez gains yards after a catch against Houston Texans defensive back Brandon Harris (26) and free safety Danieal Manning (38) during the second quarter in Foxborough, Mass., Monday night. (AP Photo)

Matt Schaub force a ball into double coverage in the Patriots' end zone. Devin McCourty picked it off and returned it 19 yards, setting up more pinpoint throws by Brady, who finished 21 of 35.

He couldn't miss if he tried, his receivers were so uncovered: Brandon Lloyd for 14 yards, Danny Woodhead for 18, Hernandez for 13, then Lloyd for the 37-yard TD to make it 14-0. Texans defensive coordinator Wade Phillips could only shake his head in disgust at his players' inability to challenge the Patriots.

It got worse. At the end of a 70-yard drive helped by a 26-yard interference call on Danieal Manning, no Texans were lined up to Brady's left in front of Hernandez. A quick snap, a quicker pass and the tight end waltzed into the end zone.

New England was headed for its 20th successive home win in December, and its 21st straight victory in the second half of the schedule.

Houston was headed back home wondering not only how it could measure up to a perennial championship contender in the future, but if it could hold off surging

Indianapolis in the AFC South. The Texans have a two-game lead but face the Colts (9-4) on Sunday in Houston, then in the season finale at Indianapolis.

Although the Texans have clinched at least a wild-card berth, they haven't had a truly convincing win since October. This was a convincing defeat, however — although they got on the scoreboard in the third quarter with an 88-yard drive capped by Arian Foster's 1-yard run.

By then the Patriots had their fourth TD, a gorgeous 63-yard throw to Donte' Stallworth, who was re-signed last week to replace injured Julian Edelman. It gave Brady his 18th game with at least four TD passes, moving ahead of Hall of Famer John Unitas for fourth all time.

Brady nearly had a fifth as Woodhead broke free on a screen pass early in the fourth period. Texans stand-out defensive end J.J. Watt, who was pretty much invisible otherwise, forced a fumble, but the ball soared 11 yards into the end zone, where Lloyd fell on it for a 35-7 lead.

Stevan Ridley made it 42-7 with a 14-yard run. The Texans have allowed 42 points in both losses, the other coming against Green Bay on Oct. 14.

Freshman Basketball Quakers edge West Branch

SALEM — The Salem freshman basketball team topped West branch 52-50 on Monday night. D.J. Pullie netted 16 points to lead the Quakers. Eric Campolito, Tyler Simms and Brando Weikart all recorded eight points for Salem (3-0).

Austin Smith led the Warriors with 15 points. Daniel Laut added 13 and Matt Heffinger netted nine.

The Quakers travel to Marlinton on Thursday.

Jr. High Basketball Heartland Christian 38, Jefferson County 0

Sarah Keyes scored 16 points to lead Heartland Christian over Jefferson County 38-0. Alyssa Koskian added eight points, Taylor Tomb chipped in with three and Erika Brooks scored two points.

The Lady Lions improve to 2-2 on the season and play again on Thursday evening at Heritage Christian.

Lady Quakers split

SALEM — The Salem Lady Quakers 7th grade basketball team fell to Minerva at home 33-13. Allee Davidson led Salem with 12 points in the loss. The 7th grade falls to 0-3 on the season.

In the 8th grade game, the Lady Quakers knocked off the Lady Lions 49-24 to improve to 3-0. Chloe Cheserne led Salem with 16 points followed by Kasey Jamison with 14. Clara gether and they have success, that as a teacher or a coach, that's where you get your joy."

NOTES: Shurmur was convinced RG3 would transform whatever team drafted him. He praised the Redskins for maximizing the QB's strengths. "There was no doubt in my mind that he would be a success in this league," he said. "No doubt. It doesn't surprise me the success, and I credit their coaching staff because they have incorporated things in their offense that utilize his skill and ability and that's smart." ... Weeden made an awkward slide on a scramble in the first quarter Sunday, ripping up a huge chunk of turf in the process. "That was the hardest, roughest looking slide I've ever seen," Shurmur joked. "I thought they were going to stop the game and bring out a dump truck." ...The Browns signed TE Brad Smelley from the practice squad to the active roster and waived DL Ronnie Cameron.

over Kansas City was Cleveland's best all-around performance. The Browns gave up an 80-yard touchdown run to Jamaal Charles on the game's opening play, but responded by scoring 30 unanswered points and posted their most lopsided win since 2003.

It was another positive sign for Shurmur, who seems to be improving in his second season along with his roster of rookies, first- and second-year players. Shurmur was quick to point out during his news conference that Cleveland's rookies have combined to make 72 starts — a league high. Indianapolis is second with 44.

"That's good for the future because we're finally starting to find how to win football games with these young players," Shurmur said.

There's progress on both sides of the ball. Cleveland's offense is showing better balance behind rookie quarterback Brandon Weeden, who is learning to manage games and not forcing as many passes as he did earlier this season. The defense, anchored by a deep line, is showing signs of becoming a dominant unit and playing with a nasty attitude.

The Browns, who lost at least 11 games in each of the past four seasons, are beginning to blossom.

"I want to override my boundaries with, 'We're the best team,' or say stuff like that, but we're putting something together here and it's going to be beautiful," said rookie running back Trent Richardson, who scored twice in Sunday's win to tie Hall of Famer Jim Brown's franchise rookie record with nine rushing touchdowns.

"We haven't arrived yet, but we're just trying to win to get to the next level and be an elite team."

It remains to be seen if Shurmur will be around to coach the Browns once they move to a higher tier.

Owner Jimmy Haslam paid $1 billion to buy Cleveland's franchise, and he and new CEO Joe Banner may have already made up their minds to hire a new coach. If that's the case, the Browns' record over the final three games — home against Washington and road games at Denver and Pittsburgh — may not matter.

But if the Browns run the table, finish 8-8 and somehow make the playoffs, it would be difficult to explain not bringing Shurmur back for a third year.

Incredibly, the playoffs are still possible, but Shurmur said he has not raised any postseason possibilities with his team.

"I'm not going to focus on that," he said. "Our energy, our efforts are all going to be directed toward the Redskins and that's where we need to be. It's a little bit easier to be shortsighted and narrow-minded with three games to play and I think we have to make sure we stay in the moment."

"We all know the math changes if you don't take care of business this weekend, so that needs to be our focus."

In recent weeks, Shurmur has displayed more outward support toward his players. On Sunday, he kicked himself for pulling backup running back Montario Hardesty after he fumbled at the goal line. On Monday, Shurmur explained that he challenged a ruling that Josh Cribbs was down at the 1-yard-line because "I wanted Josh to have a touchdown and I thought that was worth it."

Shurmur is fighting for his players, and they're fighting for him — with every win.

It's all gelling for the Browns, and now it's a matter of whether it can stay that way.

"I've always been fond of our team," Shurmur said. "What I like is they're tough, they play hard and when we ask them to do things they respond. They're a very coachable group. There's a mixture of young guys and older guys that have been around here a long time and when you see it all come to-

Cowboys player death raises question of safety net

IRVING, Texas (AP) — San Francisco 49ers defensive end DeMarcus Dobbs walked away from a one-vehicle accident on his 25th birthday last month and was arrested on suspicion of driving under the influence.

Less than two weeks later, with the NFL rocked by the car crash that killed Dallas Cowboys player Jerry Brown and left his teammate, Josh Brent, facing a manslaughter charge, Dobbs swears he'll find another way home whenever he does too much partying.

"I'm never going to put myself in that situation ever again," he said.

This is, of course, exactly what the NFL, its teams and the players' union wants to hear amid fresh questions about whether all the warnings and safety nets — because players in most of the major sports leagues arguably have more than the general public — will ever be enough to prevent accidents and deaths.

"There's a lot of pressure being in the NFL ... but it's no excuse for bad decisions," Detroit coach Jim Schwartz said. "Players have a lot of options, tools at their disposal, that they need to take advantage of, but it comes down to individuals making good decisions."

Brown's death on Saturday and the arrest of defensive tackle Josh Brent after police say he caused the fatal wreck by speeding and driving drunk put the NFL Players Association's safe ride program back in the spotlight. It was revamped three years ago after concerns that enough players weren't using it.

Union spokesman Carl Francis said the program is a strong point of emphasis, and every player's membership card includes the contact information. And CEO John Glavin of Florida-based Corporate Security Solutions Inc., which runs the program, said he is happy with how the union gets the word out on the program.

He also stressed the confidentiality of the program, saying the company doesn't even tell the union when players call for rides.

Jacksonville cornerback CB Rashean Mathis, the team's union representative, said players rarely, if ever, use the program.

"Confidentiality is the problem," Mathis said. "Guys are going to go out and have fun. We're just like the regular guy that works a 9-to-5 job. On a Friday night, he goes out and has some beer. It's not the best-case scenario, but it happens in life."

To use the program, players can either work in advance to set up a full night with a driver or make a call for a ride home. The brochure says most response times are less than an hour. The program is available all year, and Glavin said his company also serves the NBA and NHL.

In Major League Baseball, designated drivers are available to players and fans through the teams, and the players have access to a confidential program that will take them wherever they need to go.

In the NFL, some teams rely solely on the NFLPA's program, while others have an additional system. In Cincinnati, the Bengals pay a company to make two drivers available when an employee calls. One drives the caller home, and the other follows in the employee's vehicle.

Glavin said some players hesitate to use that kind of program because they don't want others driving their expensive vehicles. Either way, the program hinges on a player making the first move.

"We can't make them make the phone call," Glavin said.

Last summer, the NFL held its 15th annual rookie orientation, which includes a number of life skills sessions. For the first time, separate sessions were held for the AFC and NFC to make the groups smaller, and current and former players were brought in as speakers, including Philadelphia quarterback Michael Vick and Cincinnati cornerback Adam Jones. Both have had high-profile legal problems, with Vick spending time in prison in a dogfighting case.

The NFL has sessions on issues ranging from guns to alcohol and drug use at other times of the years, and all teams have counselors who work with players, league spokesman Dan Masonson said.

League owners are gathering in the Dallas area Wednesday. The agenda was set to focus in part on player safety through the addition of leg padding, but it's likely to change. A week before Brown's death, Kansas City Chiefs linebacker Jovan Belcher fatally shot his girlfriend before driving to the team's stadium and shooting himself in front of his coach and general manager.

"I am sure the events of the past two weeks will be discussed at the league meeting," league spokesman Greg Aiello said. "We are always looking to do more."

Several coaches said Monday they were talking again about issues of safety and good decisions after Brown's death. They also acknowledged there was only so much they could do, as did Mathis.

"We're not immune from life because we're athletes," Mathis said. "We're not, but there are smarter choices."

Dodgers add Greinke, South Korea's Ryu to rotation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Flush with cash after the team's sale this year, the Los Angeles Dodgers are busy spending it on starting pitching.

The team introduced left-hander Ryu Hyun-jin (Ree-YOO He-YUN jin) of South Korea on Monday, making him the first player ever to go directly from the Korean league to the major leagues.

And he was just the setup man.

The Dodgers finalized a $147 million, six-year deal with free agent right-hander Zack Greinke later in the day.

"We were definitely hoping for Zack," said Magic Johnson, a partner in Guggenheim Baseball Management which bought the team last spring. "Zack is a proven winner. When you put him together with Clayton, man, we feel really good."

The deals for Greinke and Ryu give the Dodgers eight starting pitchers under contract for next season, joining 2011 NL Cy Young winner Clayton Kershaw, Chad Billingsley, Josh Beckett, Ted Lilly, Chris Capuano and Aaron Harang.

That doubles the number of starters the Dodgers had just two years ago.

"Feeling more fortunate than gluttonous," general manager Ned Colletti said. "It's better to be sitting where we're sitting than where we've been. It's rare you need just five pitchers."

The Dodgers were eager to bolster their pitching this winter knowing that Billingsley (elbow) and Lilly (shoulder) are coming off surgeries.

Johnson called 2009 AL

Cy Young winner Greinke "the big one."

Colletti added, "We believe he brings a lot to this team and to a pitching staff that was already very good."

Greinke split last season with Milwaukee and the Los Angeles Angels. He went a combined 15-5 with a 3.48 ERA in 34 starts, and finished the season going 5-0 with a 2.04 ERA in his last eight starts after Aug. 24.

The 29-year-old pitcher spent his only full season in the NL in 2011, tying a career high with 16 wins.

STEELERS FROM 1B

we're still in it," linebacker Larry Foote said. "It's one of those gut-checking times."

Maybe it's a good thing the next three weeks hardly look like gimmes. Pittsburgh has done its best work this season when backed into a corner, and a road trip to Dallas (7-6) followed by home games against AFC North rivals Cincinnati (7-6) and quickly improving Cleveland (5-8) to wrap up the regular season is sure to get the Steelers' attention.

If not, a season that looked promising a month ago will end before the calendar flips to 2013.

"Good teams have to find a way to win," defensive end Brett Keisel.

Even if it's hard to tell which side of the equation the Steelers are on at the moment. A resume that includes wins on the road at Baltimore, Cincinnati and the New York Giants also includes losses to Oakland, Tennessee, Cleveland and the Chargers, who are a combined 17-35.

Quarterback Ben Roethlisberger can't quite put a finger on why the Steelers play so well against good teams and so poorly against also-rans. And unlike the losses to the Browns, Raiders and Titans, this one wasn't even close.

The Chargers, finishing out the string under likely lame-duck coach Norv Turner, dominated the first 40 minutes and built a 27-3 lead en route to winning in Pittsburgh during the regular season for the first time in franchise history.

San Diego quarterback Philip Rivers picked on Steelers cornerbacks Cortez Allen and Curtis Brown relentlessly. The duo, getting extended playoff time in place of injured starter Ike Taylor, struggled against the Chargers' big wide receivers. San Diego converted 12 of 22 third downs, with 11 of them coming through the air, and all but two of them coming with Allen and Brown in coverage.

Coach Mike Tomlin actually benched Brown in the second half in favor of Josh Victorian, who was activated from the practice squad an hour before game time.

"We didn't make the necessary plays that we needed to make," Allen said. "We have to be better as a whole. We just have to be better."

Something the Steelers tend to be against the league's better teams. Pittsburgh's high points this fall have come in an inspiring 24-20 win over the Giants Nov. 4, and an invigorating 23-20 comeback triumph in Baltimore last week.

They cruised past the Washington Redskins with ease, crushed the New York Jets and handled the Philadelphia Eagles when it looked like their cross-state rivals had a pulse.

The key to those victories, however, came in lights-out defense and a hint of a running game. The Steelers had neither against the Chargers. Jonathan Dwyer managed all of 32 yards rushing, or one more than Roethlis-berger gained on five last-option scrambles.

Though Roethlisberger passed for 285 yards and three scores, most of the yards and all of the touchdowns came after San Diego had the game firmly in hand.

Roethlisberger, as he tends to do, took responsibility for the lack of production though he was hardly helped out by his wide receivers or his short-handed offensive line.

Mike Wallace and Antonio Brown both watched deep balls that could have changed the game bounce harmlessly away in the first half and Roethlisberger spent long portions of the afternoon under significant duress.

Pittsburgh will continue to shuffle the line next week after left guard Willie Colon went down with a knee injury in the first half. Center Maurkice Pouncey moved from center to guard, with Doug Legursky taking over for Pouncey. Putting a line together on the fly is nothing new for the Steelers, who did it with great aplomb two years ago en route to the Super Bowl.

At this point, nobody is thinking that far down the road. And after getting plenty of help on Sunday, Pittsburgh knows it's time to start helping itself if it wants to play into January.

"Our goals are still big," Foote said. "We have to correct this thing and make a commitment."

West Branch Middle School wrestlers win

BELOIT — The West Branch Middle School wrestling team won the Jackson Middle School Holiday Tournament on Saturday. The Warriors won their pool by defeating Glen Oak 63-30, Crenshaw 74-24 and New Philadelphia 69-21.

The Warriors then defeated host Jackson in the finals 48-33 to win the championship. The win improved the team's record to 9-0.

Justin Mitchell, Max Pigsa, Peter Biery, Cameron Thorn, Matthew Steer, Carl Bates and Ian Sharp each went 4-0 on the day. Colton Brown, Travis Kuttler and Dylan Miller each won three matches. Tyler Vlaiku and Isaac Edgell each had two wins while Nick Zinni, Jacob Hendricks and Cole Pittman each added one.

The Warriors next match is at home on Thursday against Louisville.

Pirates re-sign reliever Grilli to 2-year deal

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates have re-signed free agent reliever Jason Grilli to a two-year contract worth $6.75 million.

The 36-year-old Grilli has enjoyed a career renaissance in Pittsburgh since originally signing with the Pirates in July 2011. He went 1-6 with a 2.91 ERA in 64 games in 2012 and struck out 13.8 batters per nine innings, fourth-best in the National League.

The signing also gives the Pirates some flexibility in the bullpen next year in case it ever decides to part ways with closer Joel Hanrahan.

Grilli has spent the majority of his career as a middle reliever but has struggled staying healthy until arriving in Pittsburgh. He has been a mainstay in the seventh and eighth innings with the Pirates because of his ability to get strikeouts in key situations.

Ohio State's Hankins giving up senior season

COLUMBUS (AP) — The guy they call "Big Hank" is taking a big, early jump to the next level.

All-Big Ten defensive tackle Johnathan Hankins announced on Monday he will give up his senior season at Ohio State to make himself available for the 2013 NFL draft.

"I will always be grateful for the family I have gained here at Ohio State," Hankins said in a release issued through the school. "My three years have provided amazing experiences for me, and they are years I will never forget or take for granted."

Hankins, who said he plans to return to finish his degree, appeared in 38 games the past three years and started every game the past two seasons. He was fourth on the team in tackles in 2011 with 67, including 11 for minus yardage. This past season he was fifth in tackles with 55, including four tackles for a loss.

"I have enjoyed coaching and getting to know Johnathan Hankins over the past year," Ohio State coach Urban Meyer said. "His hard work on and off the field has given him an opportunity to move on to the next level. The coaching staff and I wish him all the best."

The 6-foot-3, 322-pound Hankins ends his Buckeyes career with 138 tackles, including 16.5 tackles for a loss and five quarterback sacks.

The Buckeyes went 12-0 and won the Big Ten's Leaders Division, but were barred from playing in a bowl game by violations committed under former coach Jim Tressel.

Hankins thanked several staff people, including Meyer. He also thanked Tressel for recruiting him.

Disney no longer part of PGA Tour
PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The PGA Tour's event in Mexico will anchor a six-tournament schedule next fall that will not include Disney for the first time in more than 40 years.
The tour next year goes to a wraparound season and will offer FedEx Cup points for the six tournaments that will kick off the 2013-14 season. That season will start with the Frys.com Open at CordeValle Golf Club in northern California on Oct. 10-13 and conclude with the OHL Classic at Mayakoba in Mexico on Nov. 14-17.
After about a two-month break, the 2013-14 schedule will resume at Kapalua with the TournaMent of Champions.
Disney has been part of the PGA Tour landscape since Jack Nicklaus won the inaugural event in 1971. That it was dropped from the new schedule was not a surprise. Disney lost its title sponsor when the Children's Miracle Network Hospitals did not renew, and Disney did not aggressively pursue a replacement.
"We've had a wonderful 40-year relationship with the tour," Disney tournament spokesman Tony Morreale said Monday.
Mexico had been played opposite the Match Play Championship in February. It now moves to the end of the calendar year, hopeful of drawing a stronger field.
The fall portion of the schedule includes two tournaments in Asia. After the new season starts in California with the Frys.com Open, it goes to Las Vegas the following week and then heads across the Pacific to the CIMB Classic in Malaysia and the HSBC Champions, a world Golf Championship event in Shanghai. For the first time, both Asia events will count as official tournaments.
Without taking a week off, the tour returns to America for the McGladrey Classic at Sea Island, hosted by Davis Love III, on Nov. 7-10, followed by the Mexico tournament.
All tournaments will be broadcast by Golf Channel. The amount of prize money for each tournament was not announced.

Eury Jr. named Stremme's crew chief at Swan Racing
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Tony Eury Jr. will return to the Sprint Cup Series as crew chief for David Stremme at upstart Swan Racing. The Monday hiring was part of new owner Brandon Davis' plan to use the offseason to make the team competitive.
"We have a long-term vision for Swan Racing and the addition of Tony Jr. is another step in that process," said Davis, CEO of independent oil and gas company Swan Energy. "Tony brings a world of experience to Swan Racing and will be part of our long-term success."
Eury had spent the last three seasons as crew chief for Danica Patrick at JR Motorsports until his release from the Nationwide Series team in September because of a difference in philosophy between Eury and Dale Earnhardt Jr., his cousin.
Eury also had been a co-owner of JR Motorsports. He won 19 Sprint Cup races with Michael Waltrip and Earnhardt at Dale Earnhardt Inc., and went with Earnhardt to Hendrick Motorsports in 2008. He and Earnhardt won a pair of races at Hendrick Motorsports, but were split apart 12 races into the 2009 season. Eury then moved full-time to JR Motorsports.
At Swan Racing, he'll be re-united with director of competition Steve Hmiel, whom Eury worked for at DEI. Davis announced Hmiel's hiring last week.
"I am really impressed with the team Swan Racing is building and I am proud to be part of it," Eury said. "I am looking forward to working with David Stremme behind the wheel and with competition director Steve Hmiel."
Stremme is thrilled with the direction of the team, which is making key hires and is committed to race next season. Stremme parked early in 20 of 28 races last season.
"The team has transformed itself virtually overnight. It's hard to believe just how different this team is in such a short period of time," Stremme said. "This is how you build success from the ground up, you hire quality people, put their experience to work and execute on race day. Let's go racing."

Slumping Ravens fire offensive coordinator Cameron
OWINGS MILLS, Md. (AP) — Cam Cameron was fired Monday as offensive coordinator of the Baltimore Ravens, who have lost two straight and are still striving for consistency in the running and passing game.
Cameron ran the Baltimore offense since the start of the 2008 season for coach John Harbaugh. Since that time, the Ravens' attack has repeatedly taken a back seat to the team's defense, and this year the offense ranks 18th with 344.4 yards per game.
Jim Caldwell, who was hired as quarterbacks coach before the season, will assume Cameron's duties. Caldwell was head coach of the Indianapolis Colts from 2009-11.
Harbaugh didn't give a detailed explanation for the move, which came less than 24 hours after the Ravens lost to the Washington Redskins 31-28 in overtime.
"We put 28 points up, so you're not going to say it's a reaction to a down offensive performance. It's not that. I think that's really important to point out," Harbaugh said. "It's what I believe is best going forward for our offense and for our football team."
"Cam was doing a heck of a job here. He was doing a heck of a job here for a long time. Nobody knows that better than me, and nobody has stated that more times. I believe that. I also believe right now at this time, the timing says this is the best thing, and this is what we're going to do."

The move comes with the Ravens stuck in their first losing streak since they dropped three in a row in October 2009. Yet Baltimore (9-4) needs only one win to sew up its fifth straight playoff appearance and holds a two-game lead in the AFC North over Cincinnati and Pittsburgh with three games to play.
"I don't know that staying put wouldn't have gotten us there," Harbaugh said. "What you try to do is put yourself in the best position possible as you see it to be the best football team you can be and then go compete and go see what you can get accomplished."
"Our first goal right now is to secure a playoff berth. Our second goal is to win the AFC North. That's squarely in our sights. Our next goal is to secure as high a playoff seed as we can. The next goal is to win playoff games, get to the Super Bowl and win that thing. I feel like this is going to give us the best chance to do that."

Caldwell, 57, was quarterbacks coach for Peyton Manning at Indianapolis before taking over as head coach. He will make his NFL debut as an offensive coordinator on Sunday against the Manning and Denver Broncos (10-3).

"I had an opportunity to talk with (the offense) and really, in a nutshell, I just tried to make them understand that what we're trying to do is get that much better," Caldwell said, holding his index finger and thumb about an inch apart. "That's about it. That's a difficult task, obviously, trying to get that done in this league. But that's what we're shooting for. It's not a system change. Obviously the Ravens' offense is the Ravens' offense. It's not a philosophical change. John sets the philosophy here of this team and we follow suit."
Although Harbaugh refused to criticize Cameron, the Ravens' offense has sputtered at times this season. Baltimore scored touchdowns on three of its first four possessions against the Redskins but managed only seven points after halftime.

► INDIANS NOTES

AP Source: Indians, Reynolds agree to 1-year deal
CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cleveland Indians entered the offseason searching for a right-handed power hitter to bolster their lineup. After striking out at last week's winter meetings, they may have finally connected.
A person familiar with the negotiations said Sunday night the Indians have agreed to a one-year contract with free-agent slugger Mark Reynolds. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the deal is pending a physical.
Reynolds would likely take over at first base for Cleveland, but he also could be used as the designated hitter.
Reynolds, who hit 23 homers last season for Baltimore, would definitely bring immediate pop to the Indians. Last season, Carlos Santana led the club with 18 homers. The Indians have needed a righty batter to balance out their heavily lefty lineup.
Indians general manager Chris Antonetti spoke with Reynolds' agent at the winter meetings last week in Nashville, Tenn. The club also showed interest in Kevin Youkilis, who is weighing an offer from the New York Yankees. The Indians reportedly wooed Youkilis with a two-year package, and new manager Terry Francona personally reached out to one of his former players, hoping to bring him to Cleveland.
The Indians also have pursued free-agent outfielder Nick Swisher, who has drawn interest from several teams.
Cleveland made a four-year offer to Shane Victorino last week, but he signed a three-year deal with Boston.

CAVS FROM 1B

22.9 points and 5.6 assists per game back in their lineup. They lacked his floor leadership and especially someone to take over games in the fourth quarter.
They were just 2-8 with Irving and one game worse than that without him.
"We've got to get better," Scott said. "That's the bottom line. We've just got to get better. We did some good things the last two games on the defensive end. We didn't do a lot of good things on the offensive end, per se. But we made some progress in certain areas we wanted to. It's just a matter now of trying to make sure we get a little bit better each month."

While the Cavs are getting Irving back, they're still without rookie guard Dion Waiters, who has missed four games with a sprained left ankle and will sit against the Lakers.

Scott said Waiters also has a bone bruise and is "still a little ways away."

"He's just now starting to do some running," Scott said. "If it was a regular ankle sprain, he probably would have been able to practice, but the bone bruise obviously makes it a little more difficult for it to heal. It's going to take a little time."

► NHL NOTES

NHL cancels games through Dec. 30
NEW YORK (AP) — The NHL eliminated 16 more days from the regular-season schedule Monday, and if a deal with the players' association isn't reached soon the whole season could be lost.

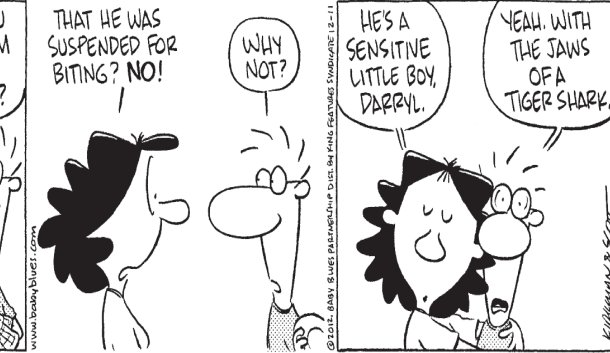

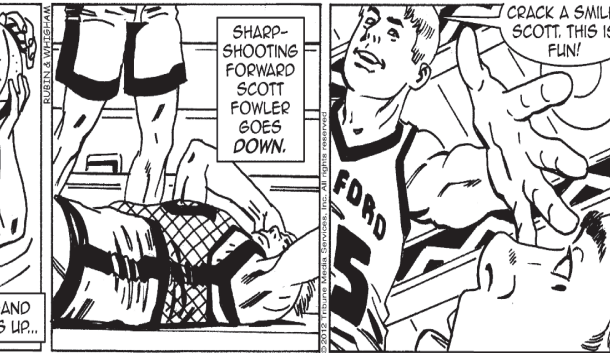

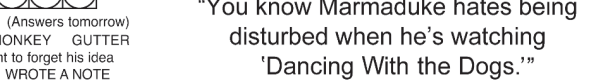

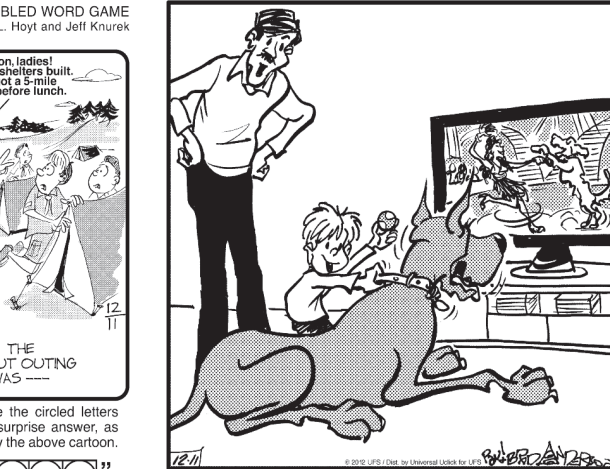

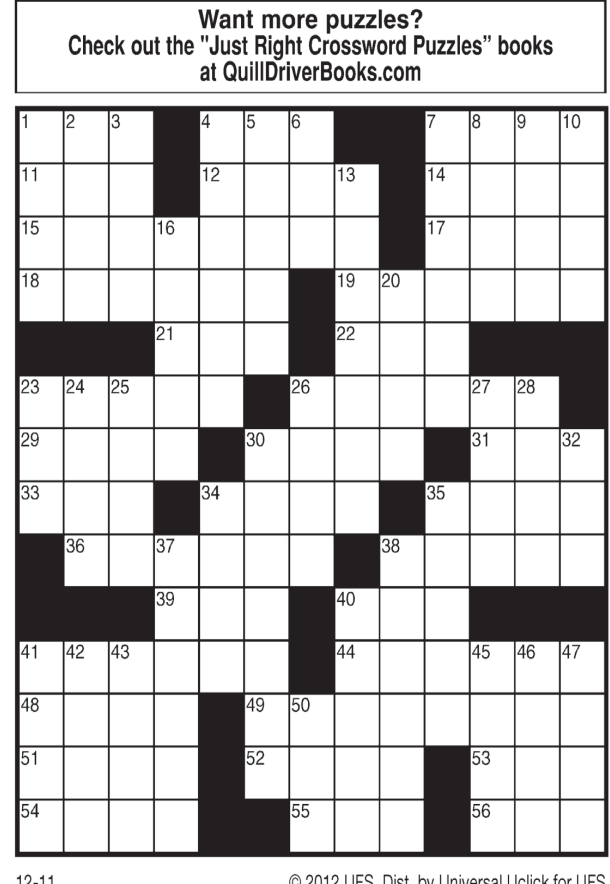

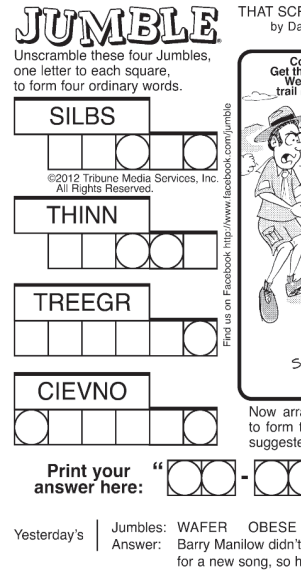

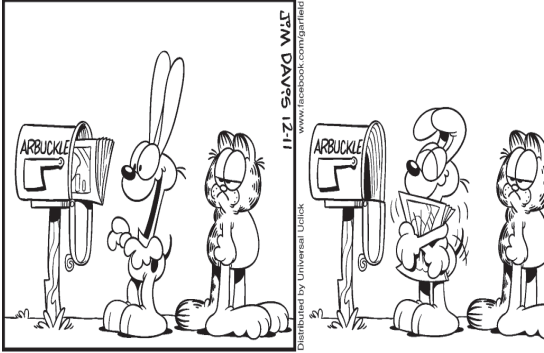

The league wiped out all games through Dec. 30 in its latest round of cancellations. Already, 422 regular-season games had been called off through Dec. 14 because of the lockout, and the latest cuts on Day 86 of the NHL shutdown claimed 104 more. The New Year's Day Winter Classic and the All-Star game were canceled earlier.
In all, the 526 lost games account for nearly 43 percent of the regular season that was scheduled to begin Oct. 11.

The cancellation of just two more weeks of the season, however, could perhaps signal hope of a deal to begin play in early January. Negotiations between the league and the players' association broke off last week, but NHL deputy commissioner Bill Daly said Sunday the sides are trying to restart talks this week. Daly wrote in an email to The Associated Press on Monday that nothing had been completed regarding a meeting with the union. Whenever the sides do get back together, they will need to work quickly on a new collective bargaining agreement. Commissioner Gary Bettman said last week, after the most recent round of negotiations, that a season must consist of at least 48 games to protect its integrity. That's the same number of games played during the lockout-shortened 1994-95 season.
The 1995 lockout ended Jan. 11. The season

Mercury and Neptune Show
Reruns

Talk is cheap when Mercury and Neptune square off and because Mercury is traveling backward, this aspect will happen yet again, coloring the action until the 13th. At least this is the last time this year for such a square. Do your research. Check references. Ask for proof that people can do what they say they can do.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). It's a challenge to make everything spotless and orderly, but one you'll take on gladly as you'll see the necessity and value in this endeavor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). There's something inside you controlling the external scene. Your emotional changes are quickly reflected in the world. It's not at all surprising to you when life defies the notions of cause and effect or space and time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You know what you're doing, but this is no time to slack. Rather, go forward, fully assimilating the skills you've acquired until they are second nature -- until even your perseverance is second nature.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Sometimes you have to be relentless to make your desire real. This is not a problem for you. With your crabby pincers poised to fight, you'll embody the values of continuous improvement and hard work.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You'll release your energy into an aspiration. But for that energy to become a real force in the world, it needs to be organized into a plan. You'll spend many hours this week coming up with that plan.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The overly-assertive person will give you much more than you want or need. It's almost abrasive the way this person contributes to your world, and it makes you want to go the other direction, giving precisely what's asked of you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Tune into what others cast off. You're just the person to make something glorious out of the items, jobs and relationships that others no longer value.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You'll care for yourself in special ways, adding to your attractive qualities. Wouldn't it be wonderful if someone felt like the luckiest person alive because he or she met you?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There's much you want to do by the end of the year, and you're not the only one going for the prize. Undaunted by the competition, you keep your nose in your own business, advance and achieve.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You have a talent for communicating clearly and thoroughly. You can talk to, and listen to, anyone. You will bridge the gap between generations, cultures and economic status.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You already know what you think, so you'll try on other people's opinions and viewpoints for size. Doing so will increase your capacity for empathy as well as your knowledge of the world.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). People don't know whom to trust until they meet you. Your honesty opens doors. You have no agenda and are not looking for what you can get out of a situation. You simply want to contribute.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (DECEMBER 11). Take things at your own pace this year. You'll choose optimistic leaders and let positive messages infect you with happiness. Also, you'll be impressed by who follows you. By January, you could gain more support and attention than you know what to do with. February highlights a spiritual calling and inner journey. Leo and Libra adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 14, 48, 22 and 3.

ASTROLOGICAL QUESTIONS: "I'm a Gemini who suffers from an anxiety disorder. As part of my mental health plan, a doctor suggested that I keep a journal of my feelings and experiences. I admit that I fantasize about one day writing a book. But my problem is that picking up a journal triggers a lot of negative feelings for me. When I was a child I was forced to write for long periods of time in what I now see as a bizarre form of child abuse. Will I ever get over this? What do you suggest?"

Born under the sign of communication, your drive to express yourself is part of your healing process. Because of this negative experience with writing, maybe you could ease into journaling by expanding your view of what a journal is. You don't have to write words in it. You could draw pictures or tape photos to the pages. You could fill the pages with collected mementos from your day -- flowers, tickets, wrappers etc. Or you could journal in audio or video form. The important part is that you develop a practice of expressing yourself and reinforcing the idea that your experience matters.

Messy roommates

Heloise

Dear Readers: Hints for college students are always popular and well-received. I asked for hints on dealing with messy roommates. It seems the major problem is with roommates not KEEPING DISHES WASHED. Here are only a few of the comments we received:

-- "When my son was in school, he shared a room with three boys. The common areas contained a small kitchenette. Since my son was a good cook, he offered to cook for the other guys if they would do the cleanup. This arrangement worked for only a few days, until the other boys started letting dirty dishes pile up. My son started washing only his dishes and putting the others into a garbage bag, which he tied up and placed under the sink. The next time he cooked and only he had clean dishes, his buddies learned in a hurry to do their part." -- Karen in Virginia

-- "I started tossing my roommates' belongings into their rooms and letting them pile up there. Once they couldn't walk into their own space, they started cleaning up." -- A Texas Reader

-- "My husband, while living with five other young men, had an issue with one roommate who never washed his dirty dishes. After a time, my husband finally took a whole sinkful of this boy's dirty dishes and put them all on his bed! After that, he was much better about cleaning up after himself -- and the others in the apartment were so grateful that they never told the slob which of them had done the 'dirty' deed." -- Meredith in Colorado

-- "I would say communication is key in any roommate situation. Having dealt with a plethora of different roommates myself, I can assure you that a simple, well-timed statement will make all the difference when dealing with messy roommates." -- A Reader, via email

-- "If you have space in a closet or behind the couch for a fair-size plastic basket, place all of the items left out in the basket. When your roommates need these items, they can get them out of the basket." -- Barbara in Texas

Well, some interesting suggestions. My take for messy students: Buy a big stack of paper plates, and save the utensils from fast-food takeout! -- Heloise

OPENING CANNED GOODS

Dear Heloise: When I'm opening such things as canned baked beans or other canned items, I open them from the bottom. This way, I don't have to fight to get all of the contents out of the can. Thanks for your time, and I enjoy your column. -- J., via email

CURTAIN CLEANING

Dear Heloise: Using dusters daily and cleaning curtains briskly can help them retain their shape longer and delay having to dry-clean them. Fostering a homeless pet who sometimes sought refuge curled behind curtains taught me this cleaning ritual. Sometimes, a lint roller is whisked on the floor to pick up seemingly invisible shed fur. -- Margarette in Texas

Hubby's hairpiece cause for amusement

DEAR ABBY: My husband wears a hairpiece. Unfortunately, it doesn't look very real. Nearly every time we are in a public place, I notice somebody staring or laughing at it. I have talked to him about it only a couple of times, but each time he tells me how attached he is to it and how good it feels on his head. I want him to be happy, but I do not want him to be publicly ridiculed. Should I throw it away? -- WIFE OF A MAN WITH A "SECRET"

DEAR WIFE: Absolutely not. If you want to help your husband, start talking with some hairstylists. There may be a product on the market that is more convincing than what your husband is wearing. (Depending upon how much hair he has on the back of his head, a transplant of some follicles may also be possible.) This isn't just about him having something on his head that "feels good." If it was only that, he'd be wearing a hat.

DEAR ABBY: I am recently married, and my husband and I have not consummated our marriage. I made it very clear that this would not be a part of our life together, and he agreed long before we took our vows. We sleep separately.

Recently, my husband has become sullen and passive-aggressive. He tries to push the issue, to the point of making unwanted physical contact. He knew going in that I am extremely uncomfortable with this form of intimacy and that my views would not change.

We love each other, but his behavior is starting to take a toll on me and the stress is straining our relationship. Please help. -- ASEXUAL IN LOVE

DEAR ASEXUAL: You and your husband are obviously not on the same page as far as what your expectations are about your marriage. How uncomfortable for you and how frustrating for him. He may have thought that after your wedding, with time, he could change your mind -- or he may regard your lack of interest in sex as personal rejection.

For the kind of marriage you envisioned, BOTH parties must feel the same way about sex. Because he agreed to something he can't live with, it might be better for both of you if you separated.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please settle a disagreement I'm having with my mother's boyfriend?

The three of us go out to eat together often. Most times we "go Dutch" and pay for our own meals. The problem arises when he pays for my meal. He'll request the senior price for all of us because he's paying.

I believe the senior discount should apply to the seniors in the group only, and mine should be the regular price. I don't think it's wrong to ask for the senior discount for theirs when I'm paying, but do not feel right claiming it for mine. (I'm more than 20 years away from qualifying.) It embarrasses me when he does it. I'd much rather pay the full adult price. Even if it's only 50 cents, I still feel like it's cheating.

Shouldn't a senior discount apply to items being purchased for the senior, or should the senior be able to apply their discount for everyone at the table, even if the person is underage? -- KIM IN IOWA CITY

DEAR KIM: Senior discounts are intended to accommodate people who are presumably retired and living on a fixed income. That said, various restaurants make their own rules. If they are willing to comply when your mother's boyfriend asks that everyone be included in the discount, it's no reflection on you if he's the one doing the asking and paying the bill.

Dermatologist can help with rosacea have tried a lot of medicines, but nothing has been a solution so far. Is there anything you can suggest? I'm sick of dealing with this. -- J.O.

ANSWER: Anyone can come down with rosacea (row-ZAY-she-uh), but people with fair skin who blush easily are the ones most likely to develop it. Redness of the nose, cheeks and chin, an outbreak that resembles acne and tangles of tiny blood vessels that have the appearance of small spiderwebs (telangiectasias) are the predominant signs of this chronic skin condition. Hot drinks, emotional situations, spicy foods and alcohol bring on an outbreak, but the most troublesome influence is the ultraviolet rays of sunlight. People with rosacea should never go outside without applying sunblock to their face.

An often-overlooked aspect of rosacea is eye involvement. The eyes dry and redden. Without proper attention, permanent eye damage can occur. An eye doctor should be involved in treating rosacea patients whose eyes are affected by it.

I don't know the treatments you have had. MetroGel is a preparation of the antibiotic metronidazole that's applied directly to the face, often with good results. Oral antibiotics have their place in treatment, too. Periostat (doxycycline) comes in a reduced dose marketed specifically for rosacea. Laser treatments obliterate the spiderweb aggregations of blood vessels.

It sounds like you're not seeing a dermatologist. You need to. You can't fight rosacea without one. In addition, contact the National Rosacea Society. The toll-free number is 800-NO-BLUSH, and its website is www.rosacea.org. The society will keep you up to date with new developments and provide a number of useful tips for controlling rosacea.

DEAR DRS. DONOHUE AND ROACH: My father and I have rosacea. I have it worse. I get acne on my face, along with redness, and now I have scarring. I never had acne when growing up. I was diagnosed three years ago with rosacea. Sometimes I don't leave the house because it's so bad.

DEAR DRS. DONOHUE AND ROACH: I am a 91-year-old male and have a blood test every year in our town's medical center. Last December, my hemoglobin was 13.8, within the normal range of 12.6 to 17.6. I had a recent test, and it was 13.7 -- out of the 14-18 range. Can you explain this? -- C.C.

ANSWER: Hemoglobin is a large protein inside every red blood cell. It's a magnet for oxygen, picking it up as the red blood cells pass through the lungs and delivering it to all body sites in need of it. The hemoglobin value is an estimate of the number of red blood cells a person has. A drop in hemoglobin indicates loss of blood or a decreased production of it. You have a couple of different values for normal. Let me give you one used by a trusted medical reference. It is 13.3 to 16.2 grams/dL for a male. You're safely within the normal range. Furthermore, the change from last December to the present is so small that it should not be a concern. It's within the acceptable error range of the test. If your doctor isn't upset, you don't need to be.

DEAR DRS. DONOHUE AND ROACH: You wrote about dizziness. I had dizziness and was examined by a specialist, who found nothing wrong. My ophthalmologist also checked me and found nothing wrong. At my annual blood test, the platelet count was high, and I saw a hematologist, who diagnosed essential thrombocytosis. I am under treatment and feel much better. People with dizziness should not give up until a cause is found for it. -- C.V.

ANSWER: Essential thrombocytosis is a fairly uncommon condition. It can cause dizziness. Your experience is well worth telling. I'm sure others will follow your lead and pursue the symptom of dizziness until a diagnosis is made. Thank you.

TO READERS: Chronic fatigue syndrome is a mysterious condition that's often overlooked. The booklet on it explains it in detail. To obtain a copy, write to Dr. Donohue -- No. 304, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 U.S./$6. Can. with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Supervisor belittles aftercare kids age group almost every day. This makes it difficult for the kids to bond with us as their caregivers and settle into a routine. Since the kids have various activities outside of our program, keeping up with the ever-changing schedules to make sure they get where they need to be is a nightmare.

Even worse, Jane sometimes subs if one of the regular caretakers is absent, and she is terrible with the kids. She frequently loses her temper and yells at them, and I overheard her tell one little boy that he was "bad" when he misbehaved. And several of us were present when she used racial slurs about some of the children.

One of my co-workers, "Sara," finally decided she had to speak up, but when she went to Jane's supervisor, it turned out Jane had already lodged a complaint about Sara, and instead of listening to what Sara had to say, they fired her. Sara was a dependable, dedicated worker who was loved by the kids. We think Jane sensed Sara's growing dissatisfaction and struck first.

Sara's dismissal has made the rest of us afraid to say anything to upper management for fear of getting the same treatment. What should we do? -- Worried for the Kids

Dear Worried: You need to register a complaint about Jane in a large enough group that no one's job is threatened. First document instances of mistreatment or inappropriate behavior with the children. Then several of you should speak to Jane's superior, together, and present your record of evidence. Don't make it personal. Surely the school would not want to leave itself open to a lawsuit from a parent.

Bike, large truck deaths soar, bucking US trend

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deaths of bicyclists and occupants of large trucks rose sharply last year even as total traffic fatalities dropped to their lowest level since 1949, federal safety officials said Monday.

Bicyclist deaths jumped 8.7 percent and deaths of occupants of large trucks increased 20 percent, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said in an analysis of 2011 traffic deaths.

Overall traffic fatalities dropped 1.9 percent, to 32,367. The decline came as the number of miles driven by motorists dropped by 1.2 percent.

Last year also saw the lowest fatality rate ever recorded, with 1.10 deaths per 100 million vehicle miles traveled in 2011, down from 1.11 deaths per 100 million vehicle miles traveled in 2010.

The increase in bicycle deaths probably reflects more people riding bicycles to work and for pleasure, said Jonathan Adkins, deputy executive director of the Governors Highway Safety Association, which represents state highway safety agencies.

Washington, D.C., for example, reports a 175 percent increase in bicyclists during morning and evening rush hours since 2004. The city also tripled its bike lane network during the same period.

“Our culture is beginning to move away from driving and toward healthier and greener modes of transportations,” Adkins said. “We need to be able to accommodate all these forms of transportation safely.”

The increase in deaths of large-truck occupants is more puzzling, but may be due to more trucks returning to the road as the economy improves, he said.

“There are more questions than answers about what is occurring here,” Adkins said. NHTSA said the agency is working with the Federal Motor Carrier Administration to gather more information to better understand the reason for the increase.

Industry officials suspect there may be a connection between states increasing their speed limits and the increase in deaths, Sean McNally, a spokesman for the American Trucking Associations, said. Texas, for example, recently increased the speed limit to 85 mph on Highway 130 between Austin and San Antonio, the fastest in the nation, he noted.

But Fred McLuckie, legislative director at the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, said it’s not clear speed limit increases played a role in rising deaths.

Truck driving is “one of the most dangerous jobs in the country,” he said. “These guys work long hours. There’s a lot of stress. There’s greater congestion on our highways. There are dozens of reasons why those numbers could be up.”

Congress passed a transportation bill earlier this year that directs NHTSA to study how well large trucks protect their occupants in crashes.

Motorcycle deaths also rose 2.1 percent, marking the 13th time in the last 14 years that motorcycle rider deaths have risen.

Despite the overall progress in 2011, preliminary crash data for this year shows that motor vehicle deaths and injuries are trending upward again, Jackie Gillan, president of Advocates for Highway and Auto Safety.

Judge hears testimony about Ohio’s exotic animal law

COLUMBUS (AP) — An animal owner told a federal judge on Monday that abiding by Ohio’s new regulations on exotic creatures would put some of her animals’ lives in danger and take away thousands of dollars from her business.

Cyndi Huntsman is one of four owners who are suing the state over its crackdown on possessing wild animals, claiming the law violates their property and First Amendment rights.

The lawsuit had its first hearing Monday before Judge George Smith in Columbus.

Ohio officials have defended the law as a common sense measure to address the growing public safety problem of private ownership of exotics animals.

State lawmakers worked with a renewed sense of urgency to strengthen the state’s regulations after a suicidal owner released dozens of creatures last year from an eastern Ohio farm in Zanesville. Authorities killed 48 of the animals, which included black bears, Bengal tigers and African lions, fearing for the public’s safety.

The law required owners to register their restricted animals with the state by Nov. 5. It also directs the owners to have their dangerous creatures implanted with a microchip before registration, so the wildlife can be identified if they get lost or escape.

The owners have taken issue with the microchip requirement, contending it puts animals’ health at risk because of the anesthesia required for the procedure. They fear animals with health problems or those who are older won’t wake up from sedation.

Huntsman likened the microchip requirement to a death sentence for some of her creatures.

“I’ll fight as long as I have to not to (microchip),” she told the court.

A veterinarian who cares for exotic animals in Oklahoma criticized the procedure as “cruel and unjustified” in some cases.

Dr. JoAnne Green, who said she was paid $4,000 to appear on the owners’ behalf, told the court that she has implanted microchips in more than a thousand animals, but still had concerns about tagging exotic creatures.

In a follow-up interview with The Associated Press, Green clarified that she had implanted hundreds of animals.

The state has argued in court documents that a microchip is “no larger than one or two grains of rice” and is typically injected in a minimally invasive procedure.

“The microchipping process is not any different in substance from (and indeed is less invasive than) vaccinating an animal,” attorneys for the state wrote in filings earlier this month.

While the law took effect in September, some aspects have yet to kick in. For instance, a permit process for owners won’t begin until next October. Current owners who want to keep their animals must obtain the new state-issued permit by Jan. 1, 2014. They must pass background checks, pay fees, obtain liability insurance or surety bonds, and show inspectors that they can properly contain the animal and care for it. Otherwise, they will be banned from having them.

One of the factors of obtaining a state permit includes timely registration.

If owners are denied permits or can’t meet the new requirements, the state can seize the animals.

Huntsman said she couldn’t imagine handing over her animals to the state if she couldn’t meet the new regulations.

“They’re what we do,” she said. “They’re our life.”

Huntsman cares for more than 200 animals at Stump Hill Farm near Massillon, where she exhibits tropical birds, primates and big cats and offers educational programs to school-children and the elderly. Huntsman’s animals also have been featured in television shows, commercials and magazine photo shoots. She also breeds certain species.
